Speed Is Villain In Large Cities

By Martha Johnson
Dodge Safety Consultant

NEW YORK — It sounds unbelievable, but speeding is the number one contributory violation in serious traffic accidents in large, congested cities.

Seventy per cent of these accidents involve pedestrians.

This is the word of Stephen P. Kennedy, police commissioner of the City of New York. And he should know. New York is one of the most traffic-congested cities in the world. More than two million cars use its crowded streets daily.

According to Commissioner Kennedy, the next two prime causes of motor vehicle accidents in a large city are: Following too closely behind the car ahead, and failure to yield the right of way.

"Many serious accidents are caused by the intoxicated driver, too," he said. "In a recent study conducted by our safety education department in cooperation with the chief medical examiner, we learned that half of the drivers who were killed instantly or died within 24 hours after an accident were under the influence of alcohol.

"In addition, many pedestrians killed also were intoxicated."

In the city, according to the commissioner, most pedestrian accidents occur between 5 and 8 P.M.; most non-pedestrian accidents between 1 and 5 A.M.

VATICAN CITY (AP)— Pope John has urged automobile drivers to be more respectful of traffic laws. Traffic laws, the pontiff told 15,000 Italian Automobile Club members participating in a national rally, "are drafted by experts and are to be respected by everybody with common sense, courtesy, patience and watchfulness."

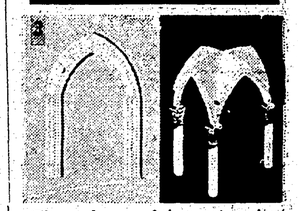
it's a FACT



The arch, one of the most ancient building devices, may have been copied from the rainbow. Wedge-shaped units, arranged in a sharp curve, support themselves by mutual pressure and thus are able to bear a load placed on them. The arch lends beauty and strength to items as varied as bridges, buildings, vaults, arcades and even bottles and bowls.

By Martha Johnson
Dodge Safety Consultant

WHAT A JOY vacationing will be this summer!

Nearly 9,000 miles of super highways will cover the country from coast to coast, enabling us to drive anywhere we want on that long-anticipated holiday trip.

These toll turnpikes and free expressways will make it easier, more fun and faster for us to travel. However, we will have to be alert to 300,000 obstacles which will make this the year of the detour.

These unexpected hazards will be 300,000 men at work on the miles and miles of new roads. We can expect to find heavy construction in every state.

To make traveling more pleasant, road-builders offer these tips on driving through construction areas:

- Slow down.
- Keep you eyes on the road.
- Follow warning signs.
- Heed the flagmen.
- Give way to heavy equipment.
