CITY BRIEF

service in order to retain paying franchises.

Also pointed out was the comparison of the distance between Prince Rupert and Terrace airport and that between Ottawa and Montreal, 101 miles to 110 miles. The city pointed out that the Air Transport Board wouldn't cut out service between the two eastern points, yet Prince Rupert residents were expected to go a similar distance by road before reaching the plane.

The ATB official told the city that the Air Transport Board would be holding a formal meeting before any decision was made.

The city then advised him that the city would be submitting a formal written brief and requested that no decision be made until the Prince Rupert brief reached the board.

MAY BE MISTAKE

Alderman A. Donald Ritchie voiced the thought that perhaps the city was making a mistake in pushing to retain the 16-year old Canso.

"How would we feel," he asked, "if after we had persuaded the Air Transport Board to agree to an extension of the Rupert-to-Sandspit service, the Canso crashed."

WOULDN'T FIGHT RULING

Mayor Lester answered immediately that "if the Air Transport Board ruled that the Canso wasn't safe the city would certainly not argue with it."

Alderman T. Norton Youngs said that it was up to the city to maintain its stand.

"As long as the ATB says the Canso is safe, then we want the aircraft kept in service."

He added that many DC-3s, such has been offered by CPA (as an alternative to the Canso) with a three-day a week service on the uncompleted Prince Rupert airport, were older than 16 years.

Both Alderman Norman Bellis and George E. Hills stressed that one of the main reasons for wishing to retain the Canso service was for the sake of the Queen Charlotte Islands residents.

City Administrator R. W. Long, who is preparing the city's brief to the board, said that the Queen Charlotte Island Ratepayers association was sending him a brief to accompany the city one to Ottawa.

BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Give Miss Brash a couple of kings and an opening bid from her partner and she thinks she can lick the world. Sometimes she's right. She was today—with a little help from the competition.

Mr. Champion led the ace of hearts, looked the dummy over and switched to the jack of clubs. Mr. Muzzy won this trick without hesitation and fired back the queen of clubs. Miss Brash won with the king and led three rounds of trumps. Then she cashed the ace and king of diamonds, followed with a third diamond, and Mr. Champion was in with the queen.

Unfortunately for Mr. Champion he had nothing left but hearts. On the heart return Miss Brash discarded the last club from the board and ruffed in her hand. The rest of the dummy was now good.

Miss Brash

"You should have beat this hand, Muzzy," Mr. Champion growled.

"Impossible," defended Mr. Muzzy. "If we could beat this one, I'll eat the cards."

"No doubt you could eat them better than you play them," returned Mr. Champion coldly, "but may I point out that if you had played the queen instead of the ace on the first club lead, I would have had a club to get out with, after winning with the queen of diamonds. That way, we take two clubs, a heart and a diamond."

Mr. Muzzy frowned in a puzzled fashion. "Say that over again," he requested, "and slowly."

"Maybe we'd better let it go," said Miss Brash uneasily. "I can only play another four hours."

Of course the play Mr. Champion suggested was not easy to see. However, Mr. Muzzy might have figured it out by thinking along the following lines. First, from his lead of the jack of clubs Mr. Champion could hardly have the king. And if the pack were a singleton, he probably would have led it at trick one.

What was the danger in letting Miss Brash win the first club with the king? The danger was that she would run away with the hand, discarding losing clubs on dummy's diamonds.

But to do that, the diamonds would have to be solid. And if the diamonds were solid there was no way to beat the hand, because Miss Brash would have five spades, five diamonds and the king of clubs for 11 tricks.

Therefore, the only hope was that Mr. Champion had a diamond stopper and if he did, it was necessary to leave a club in his hand as an out-card to use after winning his diamond trick.

This was a pretty involved problem for Mr. Muzzy to solve. But Mr. Champion will settle for nothing less than perfection. To him the play of the queen of clubs at trick two was "automatic."
