ANOTHER SIR RICHARD BIDS FOR NAVAL RENOWN.

A common parlor match may fire the train that explodes an earth-rending dynamite charge useful or disastrous, the peaceful civil engineering of industrial development or the dreadful sapper and miner work of deadly warfare; a work accomplishing application of force, or merely a spectacular outbursting of hot gases with a big noise. Last night in the Westholme Theatre a great audience saw the simple social compliment of an invitation to address a Canadian Club act as the match to an unsuspected train, and heard Premier Sir Richard McBride enunciate loud enough to be heard far and wide over the Dominion, and even the Empire also, the naval policy of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

"What are we doing to protect the magnificent wealth of our Province?" asked the Premier, and he answered himself: "Absolutely nothing! If war comes (and God forbid that it may), how do we stand? We have nothing!

"At the naval review at Spithead I thought: 'Isn't it a pity that Canada has no pretty strong unit of her own to help protect her coasts.

"I tell you that when it comes down to discussion of army and navy to defend our shores there is neither Conservative, Liberal, Labor or Independent. We are all just British through and through!

"If you went over to London and saw the poverty there, and came back to Canada witnessing the peace and plenty that pervades the great Dominion, I tell you you would never rest until Canada has a navy of her own!"

These are Premier Sir Richard McBride's own words spoken in his address to the citizens of Prince Rupert last night. Comment upon them is quite unnecessary. All Prince Rupert, all British Columbia, all Canada, knows that Premier R. L. Borden is in England today on a mission closely related to the immensely important issue of the Dominion naval policy. All Canada knows, too, that Premier Sir Richard McBride was on Britain before Borden. Borden has not announced any naval policy, but McBride has—last night. And the naval policy enunciated by Premier Sir Richard McBride of British Columbia for the Canadian nation is simply the naval policy of Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

When Premier McBride Last Arrived

Premier McBride arrived on the G. T. P. steamer Prince Rupert at 11 a. m., November 2nd, 1910, landing at the G. T. P. wharf.

He was met by the Mayor and Council, also the Conservative Association deputation headed by William Manson, M. P. P. He met a delegation from Stewart, the executive of the Conservative Association, inspected the Government wharf, toured the city and addressed a meeting in the Empress Theatre.

The seawall on the Provincial Government wharf opened yesterday by the Premier was only just completed when the Premier arrived in the city on his last visit.

The Premier was accompanied by his wife, and a reception was given in her honor by the ladies of Prince Rupert.

was inscribed the citizen's welcome to the new knight, premier of the province. George Tite read the address, which is elsewhere quoted.

Premier's Acknowledgment

With no new happy phrase, but with his usual facility of expression, the Premier acknowledged the welcome, and thanked the citizens for the address of welcome and for the framed bouquet of dried blooms from Prince Rupert soil which was handed him for Lady McBride. The Premier referred to his recent honor saying that he felt it had been bestowed on the province and its people also through him, and desiring to uphold the honor as it should be upheld worthily. He referred with appreciation to Prince Rupert, and a round of cheering greeted his address. Mention was made by the Premier in especial manner of Mr. W. J. Bowser, to whom an ovation was given as he rose to speak a few words in reply.

With a good deal of humor Mr Bowser acknowledged the compliments paid him by the Premier and the crowd, and while noticing that he had received nothing more than appreciation, and eyeing the Premier's magnificent moose-skin, the Attorney General added that none more highly than himself appreciated the honor the premier by His Majesty. (Cheers).

Opening of Wharf

All that remained now for the Premier was to open formally the government wharf, which he did with much greater ease than had been his acceptance of the rush of compliments showered upon him in the citizens' address. He referred with a touch of humor to the fact that it was two years since he had been here and even that time back urgent calls had been made upon him to have the wharf completed. He had felt that he could not possibly venture to show face again in Prince Rupert without having a wharf to give the citizens. So here he was. (Cheers and laughter). He spoke of the difficulties met with in the construction of the wharf, and declared that there is no better wharf anywhere today on the coast. (Cheers). With a good deal of very popular tact he referred most pleasantly to the great satisfaction he had in being brought on this wharf-opening occasion to the wharfside by the C.P.R. Princess May, and his old friend Captain McLeod, who is known the whole travelling world of the coast. He then declared the wharf opened, and hoped that it might stand solid a testimony to the efficiency of the administration which provided it, until Prince Rupert is a city of hundreds of thousands of happy and contented people. (Great cheering). The Premier then drove off up town in an auto, attended by several others with prominent citizens.

RUPERT HAS REALLY TAXED SALE OF BIBLES

The Editor, Daily News:

"Sir,—It seems only just to the 'two young men who were denied the privilege of selling bibles in Prince Rupert,' by the City Council that we should say a few words in our own behalf. We have travelled extensively over British Columbia, Canada and the United States handling bibles and bible helps in Prince Rupert has the distinguished (?) position of being the only town where we were denied the privilege of carrying on our work. In fact, it is the only town where the authorities were not pleased to have us work.

We do not mean to insinuate that Prince Rupert needs bibles any more than other towns, but upon investigation among the local stores we found only a few shelf worn bibles in one store, and the honorable council, when we appeared before them to ask the privilege of selling bibles, feared we would 'hurt home trade,' although they were not certain whether or no any bibles were on sale in the local stores. "THE TWO YOUNG MEN."
