it's a FACT

Although a variation of golf was played by the Romans, French and Dutch before the 18th century, the game took its present form about 1750 in Scotland. The Royal and Ancient Golf Club of St. Andrews was established in 1754. The first permanent type golf course in the United States, the St. Andrew Golf Club, was started as a six-hole course in 1888 at Yonkers, N.Y. Chicago is credited with having built the first 18-hole course in the United States.

RCMP finds frames of paintings

VANCOUVER (CP)—RCMP said Monday they have located the 24 frames of a $40,000 collection of paintings stolen from the University of British Columbia earlier this month. There was no sign of the paintings themselves.

An RCMP spokesman said the discovery of the frames in a city dump in the east end "hasn't given us any new clues or theories . . . but we're checking for fingerprints."

Police said the thieves apparently had taken the paintings from the frames carefully. The canvasses had not been cut out.

A group of boys found the frames in the dump. Eleven were complete and the others had been dismantled.

RCMP said they believe the frames have laid in the dump for several weeks and apparently were thrown there shortly after the theft between November 7 and 10th—Thanksgiving weekend.

WERE ON LOAN

The 24 paintings were owned by Edmonton art conoisseur Ernest Poole and were loaned to the UBC gallery for an exhibition. Twenty of the paintings were by Canadians and four by Europeans, including two large canvasses by Maurice Utrillo.

Mr. Poole said earlier the theft was the work of "professionals" because only the best of 85 paintings on display were stolen.

The thieves apparently worked undisturbed during the holiday weekend, their activities aided by a high construction fence which blocked view of the windows by motorists using a road a few yards from the building.

BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Mr. Muzzy is often guilty of insisting on a suit of his own, when he should support his partner's suit—and let partner play the hand.

In today's deal, however, when he should have slammed the hand at no trump or spades, he decided to put Mr. Dale in a contract of six hearts. Consistent is not the word for Mr. Muzzy.

With as many as six hearts outstanding, including the queen jack and 10, the old master had to do some tall scrambling to bring his contract home. Do you see how he won 12 tricks?

Mr. Dale

He took the diamond opening with the king. Now he saw that he could make the bid if the hearts were divided 3-3. But there was also a chance even if the hearts were 4-2. . . if Mr. Abel had a doubleton honor in the suit.

Playing to give himself every chance, Mr. Dale led a small heart at trick two and put in dummy's seven spot. Mr. Meek won with the ten and returned a diamond. The ace captured this trick and another heart to dummy's king dropped the queen from Mr. Abel's hand.

At this point Mr. Dale was convinced that Mr. Abel had started with the doubleton queen. If that were the case, Mr. Meek still had the guarded jack and there were no more hearts in dummy to lead through him.

Mr. Dale started on the spades. He cashed the ace, then led the king and discarded his last diamond. Now he led dummy's last diamond and ruffed it, reducing his trumps to two, the same number remaining in Mr. Meek's hand.

Next he cashed the queen of clubs and led a small club to dummy's ace. On the two following spade leads he pitched his last two clubs while Mr. Meek had to follow suit.

Opening lead: Queen of diamonds.

Then came the clincher. When dummy's deuce of spades was led at trick 12, Mr. Meek was forced to ruff—and Mr. Dale, whose last two cards were the ace and nine of trumps, overruffed and made his contract.

"How did you like my bidding on that hand?" asked Mr. Muzzy proudly.

"Magnificent," replied Mr. Dale with irony that was lost on Mr. Muzzy. "I congratulate you on your decision not to put me in seven hearts."

LOWESTOFT, England (CP)— A fisherman from this Suffolk seaport claims he drinks 30 cups of tea a day. This followed a claim thatb us-drivers in Leicester can put away 24 cups. One man claims he has 14 cups before breakfast.
