

Woman's Rights

It is your inalienable right to demand in a range—Economy, Promptness and Satisfaction. It is your privilege to expect the same attention, progress and efficiency in the things you use in your daily work as have been brought about in other and often less important lines of endeavour.

The Gurney-Oxford is the foremost example of cooking efficiency.

The Gurney Economizer regulates all the drafts by lifting or dropping one small lever. It keeps the fire alive for hours with practically no coal consumption. It saves 1 ton of coal in 6. The Gurney Economizer is found only on the Gurney-Oxford range.

The Gurney-Oxford Oven is absolutely and always heated the same on all sides and in all corners because the heat is evenly distributed.

This is a sure and unfailing guarantee that whatever comes out of the Gurney-Oxford Oven is crisp and light and delicious—this is the final test and the point most often advanced by those who cook on a Gurney-Oxford, those who believe it is woman's right and privilege to have in her kitchen the labor, time and money saving principles embodied in the Gurney-Oxford.

GOOD DON'TS FOR NEWLYWEDS NOT RUPERT'S ONES OF COURSE

WAYS THAT LEAD TO ESTRANGEMENT OF WEDDED ONES—
AVOID THE FATAL EARLY MARRIAGE MISTAKE OF OVER-
ECONOMY, ALSO THE DANGER OF DEBT.

"Marriage is a lottery at best!" So say the cynics. Well, if it is—and we're continually having it drilled into us that such is the case—why not make the best of it? Like the born gambler, let there be no repining once the deed is done.

But a lot of useless pain and regret could be avoided if young married couples would only use a little tact.

Unfortunately, however, the newly married woman begins the trouble very often by expecting—nay, demanding—the whole of her husband's spare time. She does not realize that he must, of necessity, hark back after marriage to the stage before the courtship, so to speak.

False Economy. She thinks he is neglecting her if Saturday afternoon is spent at a cricket match instead of at her feet.

No, somehow the young wife never understands, and indulges frequently in sulks, tears and lamentations which drive her husband to distraction and make him pause to wonder whether he is so lucky in his choice, after all.

And, perhaps, the young husband himself is a little to blame in bringing about this state of affairs, for so often he allows the tenderness of courtship to lapse too quickly after marriage. He gets into that irritating masculine habit of taking everything for granted, and his little wife, naturally, cannot understand it. Too suddenly she finds herself plunged from the sweet, warm waters of romance into the icy cold of prosaic existence as a housekeeper. Inevitably recriminations follow, and the two who started so splendidly are apt to come a dreadful "cropper."

There is also the fatal early marriage mistake of extreme economy. Of course, lavish expenditure should never be condoned; but there is a medium in all things, and the young wife and husband who sedulously deny themselves "this" and "that" are tempting the matrimonial gods to vengeance.

The following authentic story proves this. Two young people had married and settled down in the Midlands. They were extremely ambitious and determined to "get on," so they denied themselves all unnecessary pleasures. Never entering a music hall, picture house, or exhibition, they saved the money. "No," they said, "we have each other. What more do we want? Besides, every copper tells."

And within two years of the marriage day they two had separated. For they had nothing to talk about save business, and, again, business. The wife had no relaxation from the home, and became mystical and neurotic. The husband stuck so strenuously to work as to develop a mild form of neurasthenia. They mutually got on each other's nerves, and the result—dissolution of the unhappy partnership.

And why—oh, why do the newly wedded wife fancy it is incumbent upon her to drift into dowdism once having secured a husband? Why does she wear a slovenly blouse in the mornings—or even, in some cases, an untidy dressing jacket—to give breakfast to the man, to please whom, so short a time ago, she donned her finest raiment? No young wife can under estimate the harm her disregard for neatness has upon her young husband's mind.

Six Months After! To revert to the very practical side of early matrimonial mistakes, there is the question of allowance. A newly wedded couple were once so much in love as to disdain discussions of so mercenary a subject as money.

"Of course, darling," he said, "you have only got to ask me for anything you want."

And she nestled closer, utterly satisfied. But six months after the marriage that same wife approached her husband for money with fear and trembling. He had no idea of housekeeping expenses, and so questioned every halpenny she spent. His wife became so sensitive on the point that life became a burden to her.

HE FOUND A REGULAR FORTUNE

Albany, N. Y., July 16.—When Thomas O'Brien, a blacksmith, saw a red leather bag lying behind a fence near his smithy he picked it up.

A moment later he was hurriedly telephoning police headquarters. The bag contained cheques totaling $538,113, the property of the United Cigar Stores Company of New York. The company told the police that the cheques, with $222 in currency, had been sent by messenger to the National Bank of Commerce in New York for deposit. The company supposed the deposit had been made until informed that the bag and its contents had been found in Albany.

New York, July 16.—Police here cannot explain how a bag containing cheques totaling half a million dollars—the property of the United Cigar Stores Company—reached Albany.

KING WAS SEARCHED ON MINE VISIT

"The King was wearing a light grey suit without overalls, when he visited the Yorkshire collieries. When an official, as he entered the cage, requested the party to surrender all matches, pipes and tobacco, His Majesty said he had no matches, but offered his cigar case. The Archbishop of York and Lord Charles Beresford handed over match boxes, and there was soon a fine collection of pipes and cigarette cases."
