BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Counting a hand as it develops will often enable you to avoid a losing finesse and to follow another line of play which is absolutely certain of success.

In today's deal Mr. Champion led the deuce of spades, the correct choice from his holding in his partner's bid suit. Mr. Abel won with the ace, returned the ten and Mr. Dale ducked. Mr. Champion overtook with the jack to avoid blocking the suit and led his last spade.

Mr. Dale won with the king of spades and checked on his prospects. He had to admit they didn't look too good. Even if he could bring in four club tricks by some good fortune, there appeared to be no way to avoid risking the heart finesse. Of course both minor suit queens might fall doubleton but that was asking a lot. And the heart finesse didn't look too healthy as Mr. Abel was the one who had shown strength by overcalling.

Mr. Dale

The campaign had to be started somewhere so Mr. Dale laid down the king of clubs. Here the picture changed abruptly when the queen appeared on his left. At this point he did a little quick counting. Mr. Abel had started with five spades and four clubs and therefore could have only four red cards. Perhaps these included the queen doubleton in diamonds.

Trying for this possibility Mr. Dale cashed the ace and king of diamonds. On the second diamond Mr. Abel discarded the trey of hearts . . . But the answer to the problem was there anyway.

Mr. Dale cashed dummy's jack of clubs, led a small club back and finessed the nine. He cashed the ace of clubs and then calmly led his last spade. Mr. Abel won and cashed another spade. But then he had nothing left but two hearts and was forced to lead into dummy's ace-queen to give Mr. Dale a total of nine tricks.

Boy aged 15 wins U.S. chess crown

NEW YORK (AP)—Brooklyn's Bobby Fischer won the United States chess championship for the second time in a row Sunday night by drawing his 11th and final match against Robert Byrne of Indianapolis.

The 15-year-old high school student was the only undefeated player in the tournament. He has established himself strongly in first place Saturday night after an 86-move win over Arthur B. Bisguier, and he needed only a draw to clinch the title. He won six games and drew five.

Samuel Reshevsky of Spring Valley, N.Y., drew with Paul Benko, a Hungarian refugee, after 14 moves. Reshevsky's final score of 7½-3½ was made up of five wins, five ties and one loss—to Fischer.

Fischer's defeat of the international grand master in the sixth round was the turning point in the tournament.

Remember When

By The Canadian Press

The first game of the National Hockey Association was played at Montreal 49 years ago today, when Canadiens beat Cobalt Silver Kings 7-6. The circuit was enlarged 12 days later when it was joined by the pick of Canadian Hockey Association teams and operated as the NHA until the National Hockey League was formed in 1917.

Rebels march on to Havana in triumph

By LARRY ALLEN

HAVANA, Cuba (AP)—Fidel Castro and thousands of his fighting men today continued their slow westward march of triumph to Havana.

Tens of thousands in cities, towns and villages turned out to cheer as Castro and his motorized columns made their way from Oriente province, centre of the rebellion that overthrew the dictatorship of Fulgencia Batista.

His progress was slow: Camaquey, 300 miles from Havana, Sunday night; tonight Santa Clara, scene of the defeat that forced Batista to flee, 140 miles farther along the macrh, and Tuesday Matanzas, 50 miles from the capital.

Castro and his men were expected in the capital Wednesday afternoon for one of the greatest welcomes in Cuban history.

Manuel Urrutia, named provisional president by Castro, was flying from Santiago de Cuba this morning for Havana.

The people of Havana awaited Castro with full stomachs for the first time since the collapse of the Batista government and the dictator's flight to the Dominican Republic.

The rebel chiefain, now commander-in-chief of Cuba's armed forces, ordered an end to the paralyzing general strike that had closed stores, business and industries and tied up transport and communications.

He had said he would call off the strike when he was convinced Havana was safely in the hands of his men. There were still some scattered Batista holdouts, but reports from Havana assured Castro the situation was fully under control.

There were immediate signs of a return to normal in the tense, excited city.

Newspapers began appearing again. Stores flung open their doors. Buses resumed operation. Industrial workers began preparing to return to their jobs.

Castro's bearded soldiers patrolled the streets, guarded government buildings and banks and roamed the lobbies and corridors of hotels, on the watch for violence.

The security situation was enhanced by the rebel high command's order to the thousands of jubilant militia men, many of them self-appointed, to turn in their guns.

Andy McNaughton says he was Castro's agent

MONTREAL (CP)—A. R. L. (Andy) McNaughton, 42-year-old Montreal consulting engineer, today let it be known he served as an international agent for Fidel Castro, leader of the successful revolt in Cuba.

A son of Gen A. G. L. McNaughton, famed Canadian soldier, scientist and statesman, Mr. McNaughton said he travelled throughout North and South America under the code name "Esquimal", to provide Castro with information and arms.

He made the disclosure to reporter Bill Bantey of the Montreal Gazette last week but at that time asked that his name be kept secret. In a second interview with Bantey Mr. McNaughton released the newspaper from its pledge of secrecy.

He said his code name translated from Spanish means "man from the north."

"My role was not that of a soldier of fortune. I received no pay for what I did. It cost me thousands of dollars in expenses as well as many thousands which I contributed directly to the rebel cause."

As a reward, he said, he was named an honorary citizen of Cuba by Manuel Urrutia, proclaimed the country's provisional president by Castro following the overthrow of the Fulgencio Batista regime.

"As an honorary citizen of Cuba, my fight for freedom was like that of thousands of others," he said.

The dark-haired engineer, who specializes in South and Central American affairs, said he was able to help Castro after falsely leading the Batista regime to believe has was working for the deposed president.

"To help Castro I had to know what Batista's government was doing. As his (Batista's) purchasing agent in Canada, I could find out what material he was getting in Canada. If he was successful it was my job to arrange for their hi-jacking."

AUSSIES BEAT ENGLAND

MELBOURNE, Australia (Reuters)—Australia whipped England by eight wickets today and took a 2-0 lead in their five-match cricket test series.

Australia's batsmen needed only 30 runs to win when play resumed on the fourth day of the test and they took just 57 minutes to reach the required total.

A crowd of 7,000 was admitted free to the ground, because barring an unprecedented batting collapse, Australia already had the match won.

IRKED GARDENER

BROMWICH, England (CP)—Peter Cashmore was asked by the council of this Staffordshire town to cultivate the garden when he moved into a municipally-owned house. He laid a lawn and built a rockery, then a council workman laid a drain across it. On Cashmore's protest, the council promised to rebuild the lawn.
