Three guards held hostage

WETHERSFIELD, Conn. (AP) — Three guards were overpowered and held as hostages for more than six hours early today by convict-patients in the hospital ward of the Connecticut state prison.

The guards were released unharmed when prison officials granted the convicts' demand for a conference with a lawyer and a state representative. The few convicts involved gave themselves up.

THE MOVIE COLUMN

Nat King Cole seeks artistic incentives

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The other night, Nat King Cole and his wife were in slight disagreement over the directions to Ciro's.

"I ought to know," he insisted. "Back in 1938, I used to take the Sunset bus near there to rehearse a radio singer at $5 a session."

Cole has come a long way since those days, so long that he is currently able to pass up $300,000 in bookings to fulfil a long ambition of appearing on Broadway.

"A lot of people think I'm crazy," he admits. "Especially the people in my own organization, because they can see that money going out the window. But this is something that means more to me than money.

"I reached a point in my career when I needed some added incentive. Sure, I was making lots of money in night clubs and concerts. But sometimes I'd find myself doing the work while my mind was somewhere else.

"I've been thinking for five years about accepting the challenge of a Broadway show. Finally, I decided to do it. I had to do some rearranging, because I regularly play five spots each year: The Copa in New York, Fairmont in San Francisco, Fontainebleu in Miami, Cocoanut Grove in L.A. and Sands in Las Vegas. The Sands alone pays me $200,000 a year.

"They all thought I was crazy, too, when I asked out of my commitments. Maybe they're right."

The whole idea started when Cole recorded an album called Wild is Love, written by newcomers Dotty Wayne and Ray Rasch. It was a story idea that seemed convertible into a stage musical. and such a project was undertaken. Later, it was decided to create a whole new musical based on the varying themes of love. The result was called I'm With You.

Social destiny in people's hands

WOODSTOCK, Ont. (CP) —The image of Canadian society today is "private opulence, public squalor," CCF national leader Hazen Argue said today.

The main task in the challenge of the 1960s is to convince the public that ordinary people can shape their own social destinies, he told a New Party conference of the Woodstock Labor Council.

His remarks were contained in excerpts from his address issued to the press before delivery.

"We must choose between one hospital bed for every person who is sick and two cars for every family," said Mr. Argue. Choices must be made between "long-term capital development and immediate spending on gadgets, between highways and 24-inch TV screens, between helping under-developed countries and stocking our own larders with surplus goods."

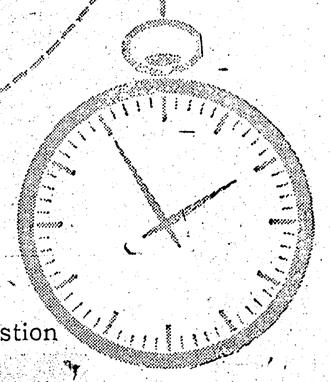
Every minute of every day someone, somewhere, buys a Falcon



It's a honey!

Ever asked a Falcon owner how he feels about his car? No question about it, he'll tell you—it's great!

Just have a look inside, he'll say. Ever seen so much room in a car built for economy? Six adults can ride in comfort. Doors open to almost four feet wide. Even the trunk is roomy—23 big cubic feet for sample cases, or family luggage and fishing gear.

Performance? Smooth, lively power, and plenty of it—in traffic or on the open highway. This year there's a choice of engines—standard Six or brand-new 101-horsepower Special Six, for those who want more zip. You get up to 35 miles to a gallon of regular gas . . . up to 4000 miles between oil changes . . . and dozens of other economy features all adding up to big savings in the long run.

Why not chat with a Falcon owner yourself and find out first hand why this car is so popular. Then see your nearby Ford-Monarch-Falcon Dealer.

(Certain features illustrated or mentioned are optional at extra cost.)
