Opening lead: Three of ♣

By focusing his attention on the dummy rather than his own hand, declarer was able to bring home an enterprising slam contract in today's hand.

North opened with one heart, and South responded with one spade. Unwilling to settle for less than game, North made a jump shift rebid of three clubs, absolutely demanding a game contract South now showed his second suit. North then showed the spade support, and South, on the basis of his club holding and realizing that North held a singleton diamond, took charge of the proceedings and went to slam.

West opened the three of clubs, and East's jack forced the king. Declarer observed that setting up dummy's heart suit would not in itself be sufficient, for only three diamond discards would be available out of the South hand. Obviously also, any play to discard two diamonds and ruff two in dummy would not be sound, for that would probably establish the ten of spades for one of the adversaries.

Assuming a three-two spade break, the most probable division, declarer saw that he could win the hand safely enough by reversing the dummy, that is to say, by ruffing North's losers in the South hand and drawing trumps with the K-Q-J of spades. He, therefore, led to the queen of hearts and ruffed the low heart in his own hand. He then cashed the ace of clubs and ruffed a low club in the closed hand. A low trump lead to dummy permitted declarer to ruff the remaining club with the ace of spades. South's last trump was used to enter dummy to draw the remaining trumps and dummy was high except for the losing diamond.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Salmon brokers here believe the export price of British Columbia canned salmon must be lower if traditional overseas markets are to be maintained.

They say British housewives have built up a high resistance to the present high retail price of B.C. sockeye, ranging up to four shillings and sixpence, about 63 cents for a half-pound can. They consider this to be about sixpence a tin too much —so they do without or buy the Japanese product.
