BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Shifty Mr. Rank tried what might have been a masterful coffee-house on this hand. But his subtle and unethical strategem backfired.

It was used against the wrong man when it was tried against Mr. Dale. The old boy had both Mr. Rank and Mr. Shady figured out perfectly.

Here's what happened. When the bidding was over Mr. Rank realized that the slam was probably makeable—if it was played right. He could expect to win either a club or a diamond, but not both.

The queen of trumps, then, was the key card. If Mr. Dale laid down his ace and king of trumps, trying to drop the queen, he would go set.

If he took a trump finesse toward Mr. Rank, he would also lose the hand. But if he decided to take the finesse the other way — toward Mr. Shady — then the slam would probably be successful.

Mr. Dale

To guard against the possibility of this last alternative, Mr. Rank figured out a plan of action. As soon as the auction was completed he appeared to believe it was his opening lead.

He pulled the five of spades from his hand as though he meant to play it. He held it in such a manner that his partner could not see it—but Mr. Dale could. Mr. Dale stared at the card in stony silence.

Mr. Shady suddenly came to life. "Just a minute, partner," he said, "it's not your lead—it's mine." Thereupon Mr. Rank returned the five of spades to his hand and Mr. Shady led the five of clubs.

Now that the stage had been cleverly set, Mr. Dale was supposed to deduce that the queen of spades had to be in the hand on his left. That is, if Mr. Rank held that important card, certainly he wouldn't have been silly enough to lead away from it.

"Must think they're playing with children," muttered the old master as he won the first trick with dummy's ace of clubs. He cashed the ace of spades, led another spade and unfailingly finessed the 10. When this held, as he knew it would, he cashed the king of trumps and lost only to the king of diamonds.

Mr. Rank frowned and rubbed his head. "Lucky guess you made in the trump suit," he said.

"I had a little help," replied Mr. Dale modestly.

Witnesses to hold 3-day rally

The local congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses will play host to visiting delegates during the Circuit rally to be held in the Civic Centre December 18, 19 and 20, a spokesman said today.

The assembly will feature discourses and demonstrations with a model ministry school.

On Friday night a service meeting is planned and on Saturday night there will be a showing of the film, "The Divine Will International Assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses."

On the third day of the rally, a public talk will be given on the subject "When God's Will to be done on Earth."

Parade, shoot tomorrow

A full turnout is hoped for tomorrow night when the "D" Company Irish Fusiliers, (Vancouver Regiment) will hold its "Pay Parade" and turkey shoot, in the Armoury at 7:30, an army spokesman announced today.

Tight money to affect school construction

VANCOUVER (?)—The school construction program in Vancouver has never been in a more critical financial position than at present, school board secretary-treasurer J. E. Robertson said Monday night.

Mr. Robertson told a board meeting that the tight money situation will directly affect more than $3,000,000 worth of proposed new school construction scheduled to start in 1960.

ESKI — By WILLIAM RITT

AT THE GATE to the quaint little house is a sign which reads "Mother Hubbard's Cottage." "Appears she's not home," muses Eski. "Shall we go in and see?" "Yes, says Doc, "but we must be very careful."

INSIDE the cottage they find the kitchen cupboard, its shelves bare. "Just like in the story book rhyme!" sighs Doc. "We've lots of food aboard the Sleigh," suggests Eski. "Let's fill the cupboard as a pre-Christmas present!"

QUICKLY, it is done. "What a fine Christmas surprise this will be for Mother Hubbard," Dan Dickor beams. "Oh," Eski suddenly remembers, "we forgot about her dog! And there's a nice soup bone aboard the Sleigh!"

QUICK as a flash Eski darts away and soon returns with the soup bone, a gay holiday ribbon tied about it. "Fine," smiles Doc. "Now let's be on our way before they return! This was a great idea, Eski!" (To Be Continued)
