The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♥

A careful defensive play by East in today's hand had the effect of putting declarer to a difficult guess, and declarer quite excusably faltered.

North and South reached a contract of four spades on direct bidding. West chose to lead the ace and another heart though a diamond lead would have settled declarer's hash at once.

In an effort to establish dummy's suit to build up a discard for the losing diamond, South led a club immediately to the queen. East won with the ace and cashed the queen of hearts. He realized the futility of trying to attack diamonds, of which declarer surely held the ace, and observed that the club suit was subject to establishment if dummy were permitted to retain trump entries. He, therefore, returned the fourth heart. West ruffed, and dummy was forced to overruff with the ten. The king and another club, ruffed high by declarer, set up that suit.

Now, if each of the adversaries had two spades, declarer could claim the balance. He, therefore, cashed the ace and king of spades and got the disappointing news. Since East retained a trump no discard could be taken on the high club, and the contract went down to defeat.

After establishing the clubs declarer could have won the hand by drawing only one trump and then leading a club. East must ruff; South overruffs and returns to dummy, drawing East's last trump. A diamond discard is then taken. But to make this play declarer would have had to play West for only two trumps and, since West was known to be short in hearts, this did not appear to be a logical assumption.

Peace talks resumed

EVIAN, France (Reuters) — French and Algerian insurgent negotiators today were reported ready to tackle the thorny questions of Algeria's future as the fifth session of their peace talks resumed here.

The session opened after a Sunday recess brought the negotiators closer to the real issues involved in the self-determination of the troubled North African territory.

An Algerian delegate, Saad Dahlab, told reporters at the insurgent headquarters in Geneva Sunday that his delegation would begin to explain their attitude on self-determination.

"We now consider that the first phase of the conference has ended," he said.

NEGOTIATORS MEET

The negotiators met today against a background of terrorist violence in both France and Algeria.

In Algiers, a grenade was hurled into a crowded cafe, injuring a European and a Moslem. In Constantine, a bus driver was shot and killed on his way to work.

Plastic bombs, the favorite weapon of right-wing European extremists, continued to shake the North African territory.

One exploded today in Constantine, shattering windows of the local offices of the French radio and television network. Another caused extensive damage late Sunday night to a telecommunications relay post, about 60 miles southeast of Algiers.

In France, two policemen were shot and seriously wounded Sunday while off duty.

WHY ADVERTISE?

When Mark Twain was editor of a Western newspaper, a superstitious subscriber found a spider in his paper and wrote the editor to ask if that was a sign of good or bad luck.

With his usual needle-witted appreciation of the situation, the humorist answered in the following vein:

"Old Subscriber: Finding a spider in your paper was neither good nor bad luck for you. The spider was merely looking over our paper to see which merchant is not advertising, so that he can go to that store, spin his web across the door, and live a life of undisturbed peace ever afterward."
