BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

There was nothing timid about the bidding of today's hand and if the defence had been equally as loose the shaky contract would have been made. It was defeated by good timing and partnership co-operation between Mrs. Fusty and Mr. Dale.

The opening lead was the six of clubs, the deuce was played from dummy and Mr. Dale won with the king. Seeing no future in that suit he shifted to the jack of spades.

Mrs. Keen made a good guess and played low but Mrs. Fusty was equal to the occasion. She played the king anyway. Now if dummy's ace won this trick, Mrs. Fusty could win the first lead of hearts and fire another spade, clearing the suit while her partner still had the king of hearts for an entry.

If. Mrs. Fusty had played the five of spades at trick two, her king would have blocked the suit later. As it was, Mrs. Keen let the king of spades win.

Mr. Dale

Very rarely is it winning procedure for the defenders to break three suits for declarer. But in this case it had to be done. Mrs. Fusty realized that now there was no future in the spade suit. If she led her last one, dummy's ace would win and it appeared certain that Mrs. Keen would then have another stopper in the queen.

Mr. Dale would need two entries to establish his spades and regain the lead and he simply couldn't have them.

So she shifted to the queen of diamonds. Dummy's king won and a small heart was returned. Alert, as usual, Mr. Dale went in with the king and returned a diamond. At this point Mrs. Keen could see a total of only seven tricks—three clubs, two spades and two diamonds.

She had to get some hearts to make the contract. Hoping for a miracle, she finessed the ten of diamonds, but Mrs. Fusty won with the jack and the ace of hearts represented the setting trick.

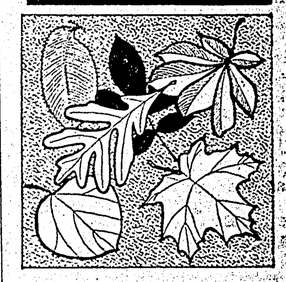
It's a FACT



No two leaves are exactly alike, even though they may come from the same branch of the same tree and seem to have the same size, shape and color. The leaf is the food factory of green plants and trees because they manufacture the food which plants must have to become full grown and healthy. Leaves have veins like blood vessels in the human body. These veins are hollow tubes which carry food and water back and forth between the leaves and the rest of the plant.

RAISED PLANTERS

If your new home has raised planters, you probably want to plant colorful Dutch tulips and other spring-flowering bulbs in them this fall.

With the wide range of colors in Dutch bulbs you can choose matching or contrasting colors to those of your own home. Be sure to mulch your bulbs.
