McCahill picks Plymouth as car of year

Tom McCahill, eminent authority on what is value in new cars has, this year picked third ranking Plymouth as the car to buy in the medium priced field.

Writing in Merchandise Illustrated McCahill heads his written observations with the quote "The '59 Plymouth is an outstanding buy, good looking, comfortable, able and by far the best in its field in all departments." He goes on to state Plymouth like all the rest of the Chrysler lines, has by far the finest suspension system ever built into an American automobile. That is of course the Torsion Bar system. The feature generally touted by most competitors today is that rather more comfortable ride which they claim research has shown is what the buyer really wants. To obtain this "soft ride" objective without horsing-had suspension, sacrifices must be and have been made.

In summing up McCahill reports that he has tested 75 percent of the new cars this year and has tested all the '59 cars in Plymouth's price bracket. He further states "In my opinion the '59 Plymouth is an outstanding buy—good looking, comfortable, able and by far the best in its field in all departments which include performance, comfort and most important of all, safety and reliability."

LONDON (AP)—Marine Engineers report two ship-borne helicopters will spot seals for a fleet of eight-masted fishing schooners on route from Murmansk to hunt Greenland seals. The fleet is commanded by Ernst Sunnin, veteran captain of Soviet icebreakers.

BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Mr. Dale had a horrible hand as far as high cards were concerned, but he had a seven-card suit, a void in one of the opponent's suits, his partner had overcalled and the vulnerability was favorable. There was also the important fact that one of the defenders would be Mr. Muzzy. So he bid four spades for a sacrifice.

On the opening lead of the king of clubs Mr. Muzzy played the nine spot. That's the trouble with knowing a little about a subject—in this case, the subject of signaling. It's better to know nothing at all.

Opening lead: King of clubs.

Mr. Dale

When Mr. Champion saw the nine of clubs, he considered it to be the start of a high-low signal which, of course, it was. He continued with the ace of clubs, on which Mr. Muzzy played the deuce. It now seemed clear that Mr. Muzzy wanted the suit continued for the reason that he had a small spade, higher than dummy's six spot, with which he wanted to ruff a third club lead.

Mr. Champion therefore continued with the seven of clubs. Dummy ruffed with the six of spades and Mr. Muzzy triumphantly overruffed with the king.

He returned the eight of diamonds to his partner's ace and a fourth club was led. Dummy ruffed with the deuce of spades and Mr. Muzzy, not to be denied, over-ruffed with the ace. Thus the defenders had to be satisfied with a meager two-trick set.

"Very clever, Muzzy," said Mr. Champion through clenched teeth. "You kept them from trapping your ace and king of trumps."

"What do you want me to do," asked Mr. Muzzy plaintively. "You've been after me to high-low to show a doubleton in your suit."

"You don't echo just to show a doubleton," Mr. Champion screamed. "You echo to show the doubleton AND some sensible reason for wanting a third round of the suit led. What good did it do you to ruff with the ace and king of trumps?"

If Mr. Muzzy had made the right play of the discouraging deuce of clubs at trick one, the defenders, by correct play from there on, could have won four club tricks, two spades and a diamond for a 700-point set.
