Hard to raise children in Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Bing Crosby has admitted what other famous fathers have discovered: "It's not easy to rear children in Hollywood.

Speaking of his four elder sons, the crooner commented in an interview: "I think I've failed them by giving them too much work and discipline, too much money and too little time and attention."

Symptoms of Crosby's "failure" as a father: Two sons have been arrested for drunk driving; all four have haunted the gay world of Las Vegas. Phillip and Dennis married showgirls; the parties of Gary and Lindsay have brought complaints from neighbors.

Bing is not the only star to be troubled by his children. His brother Bob's son, Chris, 15, once was arrested when police said he tried to steal a car.

Edward G. Robinson Jr., has been in the news repeatedly with drunk arrests.

John Barrymore Jr., made the papers recently with a felony hit - and - run, drunk driving charge. His half-sister, Diana, wrote a teary book about her long battle with alcoholism.

Charles Chaplin Jr. has a police record for drunkenness.

Barbara Ann Burns, daughter of the late comedian Bob Burns, was sentenced to 90 days for drug addiction.

Chris Crawford, adopted son of Joan Crawford, was arrested on a delinquency charge in Greenport, N.Y. after a shooting spree with an air rifle. And then there was Cheryl Crane, daughter of Lana Turner, who killed her mother's lover but was absolved of blame.

Of course, these headlined scions of the famous don't tell the whole story.

There are far more sons and daughters of stars who never have made the scandalous news.

Examples: Actress Maria Manton Marlene Dietrich; budding performers Pat Wayne John; Jody McCrea, Joel; Ronnie Burns, George and Gracie; Ricky and David Nelson, Ozzie and Harriet; James Macarthur, Helen Hayes; writer Arthur Marks, Groucho; director Andy McLaglen, Victor; and baseball executive Joe Brown, Joe E. But there are enough troubled stars to point a trend. Why is this?

British movie stars buy ranch, go western

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Why would two British-born movie stars buy and live on a big Arizona ranch 600 miles from their work here?

"It's a wonderful life," said Stewart Granger. "I'd like to stay there and never come back to Hollywood."

With perhaps a spot of exaggeration he added:

"When I got here from Arizona today, I hit such smog I could hardly see. I don't think you're conscious of how bad the smog is until you're away and come back. In Arizona the climate is just wonderful."

"Then you're a fugitive from smog?"

"No, I wanted to live in the country and have more space." We were on the sidelines while Jean Simmons, his wife, dadled out stew to a fellow Roman slave, Kirk Douglas, for a scene in Spartacus. During a break the London-reared lass said of ranching:

"I love it. We're up early, out riding, checking over the joint. It's a very full day."

Joint? At my request Granger described their spread.

Ten thousand acres of rolling hills just east of Nogales, five miles of the acreage on the Mexican border . . . six-bedroom house two-bedroom guest house, two-bedroom servants quarters.

Television "in every room" . . . a 35 acre lake feeding a five-acre lake stocked with trout . . . good tennis court . . . the Santa Cruz river coursing through cottonwoods.

Five hundred head of Charolais beef cattle, a French breed "all white and enormous" . . . seven families who work for us" their 20 children riding to a little red schoolhouse in a bus.

Granger's two children by his former marriage — James, 14½, and Lindsay 13, a girl — in boarding school at Tucson, home on weekends.

"It's not a big ranch," Granger said. "A neighbor has 50,000 acres."

Varying work schedules keep the Grangers apart at times, but "we just play it by ear." They'll make a picture together this summer in Singapore and London.

By auto and airliner they can get from ranch to Hollywood studio in three hours when the wind is right. While here they rent a five-room penthouse apartment. Daughter Tracy, 2½ comes along — "with 48 dolls and toy animals for her," Granger said.

"Oh, she hasn't 48" Miss Simmons snapped, touching off a tongue-in-the-cheek domestic tempest.

"Well, 50 then. A truckload each time we move."
