The actual bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
5 ♣	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♦

Whenever you see a defender affording declarer the luxury of a ruff and a discard by leading a suit of which both dummy and declarer are void, you may be sure he is either a beginner or an expert. The beginner will do it from ignorance, the expert from experience.

The bidding is given as it actually occurred and is entirely without the sanction of this department. I am moved by the utter disdain with which both partners treated their four card major suit holdings. North's proper response to the opening bid was one spade and that suit would have become the final trump. If South had elected to try out the spade suit himself on the second round, instead of leaping to five clubs, a four spade contract could still have been reached.

Against the five club contract the six of diamonds was opened and East's ace won the trick. The suit was continued and declarer ruffed. The ace of trumps revealed the bad news in that suit. He then cashed the ace, king of hearts, led a second trump to North's king of clubs, and ruffed dummy's remaining heart. He now got out of the lead with a trump.

At this time East had the lead with nothing but black cards in the dummy. Many players in dread of giving declarer a ruff and a discard would have led a spade, but a little counting simplified East's problem. Declarer is known to have had exactly six clubs, one diamond, and two hearts. That would leave him four spades, and one discard would do him no good. If South holds both the ace and queen of spades, there is no further play to the hand but, if he lacks the queen, the defence must not touch that suit. One discard will leave him with three spades and West's queen must still make. On this line of reasoning East exited with a diamond. Declarer ruffed in one hand and discarded a spade from the other, but he still had a spade to lose. The return of a spade by East would, of course, have permitted declarer to pick up the entire suit.
