Nuclear verdict deferred

MONTREAL (CP)— The Canadian Home and School Federation has ended four days of heated debate on nuclear arms by deferring any final decision for a year.

The question arose Tuesday during the group's annual meeting here when international committee chairman Kenneth Parker presented a report on a broad "parents for peace" project.

John Ricketts, a Toronto public relations executive, charged the committee had dropped a proposed anti-nuclear clause from the report for fear of being labelled "pink."

He urged the federation to reject the report, saying it "smothers the will of the home and school to do something substantial—to work against the threat of atomic warfare."

He asked the implementation of a "people for peace" program to include meetings with Canadian political leaders and a campaign against Canadian acceptance of nuclear arms.

The proposal was deferred Friday for a year pending further discussion among local groups.

The federation also reaffirmed a stand taken last year against nuclear tests and urged an international pact to curb them.

Opening lead: Four of ♣

Declarer's careful technique paid a very handsome dividend in the vulnerable grand slam presented today.

To the opening bid of two diamonds, South made a positive response, doing it in the good old natural way with a bid of two hearts. North reasoned that his heart holding would solidify South's suit and, in the expectation that his diamond suit could be developed readily, he embarked on a Blackwood inquiry. When South showed the necessary missing controls North bid the grand slam in hearts.

West opened the four of clubs, won in dummy with the ace. Declarer played the ace and queen of hearts next. It was apparent that chances for fulfilment were excellent if the adverse hearts and diamonds divided no worse than 4-1. If both opponents had followed to two rounds of hearts, it was his intention to cash the queen of diamonds, draw the last trump with dummy's jack and then proceed to set up dummy's diamond suit, retaining the king of spades for entry.

When East showed out on the second lead of trumps a revision in plan was called for. To test the diamond suit without drawing trumps might be courting disaster, so South cashed dummy's jack of hearts and returned to his hand with the ace of spades to draw West's last trump. At this point declarer made the play which is the climax of this little thriller. It was as sound as it was spectacular.

He led the queen of diamonds overtaking with dummy's ace, and cashed the king of diamonds. When West failed on the second lead of diamonds the entire suit could be set up with ease, merely by playing the ten of diamonds through East. After East's jack of diamonds is picked up, dummy is high.

Barring 5-0 divisions in hearts or diamonds, against which declarer would probably be helpless, there was only one distribution which could on his chosen line of play defeat him. If West had held four hearts and four diamonds to the jack, the elected line of play would have failed, but in that unlikely case the contract could only have been fulfilled by double dummy play.
