New bond issue to go on sale

OTTAWA (CP)—A new issue of $550,000,000 in government bonds and treasury bills, offering interest yields of around 6½ per cent, was announced Monday by Finance Minister Fleming. It will be used to pay off an equal amount of bonds maturing October 1.

Of the total, $325,000,000 will be offered to the public to cover an approximately equal amount of the maturing bonds held by the public.

BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

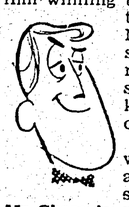
By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Many people are well paid for teaching. Others, especially bridge players, seem willing to pay for the privilege.

Teaching Mr. Muzzy is not only expensive, it is also frustrating. It takes a long time to get him started using a valuable playing device—like the holdup play, for example. And when he finally does being to use it, it's murder.

In today's deal Mr. Dale opened the seven of spades against Mr. Muzzy's three no trump contract. This was no place for the holdup play. But Mr. Muzzy thought it was.

They weren't going to catch him winning the first trick with the ace of spades. No, he played the six from dummy, nodding his head sagely as if he knew where all the cards were.



Mr. Champion won and now there was no play for nine tricks. Diamonds had to be set up and on the first lead of that suit Mr. Dale stepped in with the ace and ran off enough spades to defeat the contract.

As Mr. Champion pointed out, the ace of spades was the right play from dummy at trick one in this situation. If Mr. Dale had started with four spades there would be no problem as the defenders could then win only three spades and a diamond. If Mr. Dale had five spades, then Mrs. Keen could have only two.

But in this variation, at least one of Mrs. Keen's two cards would have to be an honor. The reason is that if Mr. Dale held king, queen and jack, he would have led the king, not a small spade.

Playing dummy's ace at trick one, then, would leave Mrs. Keen with a lone spade honor—which would block the suit. When Mr. Dale got in with the ace of diamonds he could not lay down his king of spades because that would drop his partner's honor, making Mr. Muzzy's ten spot a second stopper. If he returned a low spade to his partner's honor, she could not return the suit.

Mr. Champion explained all of this in great detail but Mr. Muzzy finally saw a way to stop the flow of words.

"I meant to play the ace of spades at the first trick," he lied, "and pulled out the six by mistake."
