Opening lead: Four of ♥

Today's hand presents an interesting case where East, a member of the younger generation, rejected all the standard rules of play. Giving sway to his own natural instincts, he found the only defense to defeat the contract.

The bidding was routine for the first round, but we feel that North's two club rebid, followed by his delayed spade raise, represented an overcautious approach. With this minimum balanced holding containing a stopper in each suit, we would be inclined to try for a nine trick game in preference to one that requires 10 tricks. Had North rebid one no trump directly, South would have promptly raised him to three no trump.

West opened the four of hearts and declarer won in his hand with the ace. The jack of spades was led and ducked around to East's queen;

The futility of a heart return was, of course, apparent. The instinctive play, therefore, would be the queen of clubs. Brief analysis, however, made it clear that South had the ace and that clubs would not provide a fertile source for defensive tricks, inasmuch as the dummy's diamonds loomed available for potential discards.

One conclusion East reached with certainty — namely, that West had the ace of spades. This deduction was based on the manner in which declarer attacked the trump suit. Holding the ace himself, he would not have been inclined to take a first round finesse of the jack.

On this line of reasoning, East set out to obtain a diamond ruff, which would be available if South had at least three diamonds. Consequently he played the ace and another diamond and, when West was in with the ace of trumps, the diamond ruff produced trick number four for the defence.
