Blackwood on BRIDGE

Don't get the idea from the current series of columns that all throw-in plays are sure things. Often you need help from the opponents in order to make them work.

The point is that you must not muff the chance for a throw-in, offered by an opponent's taking a wrong view or making an outright error.

Consider this hand, for example. Mr. Dale bid his cards strongly to reach a contract of three no trump.

One reason for his aggressive action was that he didn't expect to get the best defense from Abel and Muzzy. And on this point he was right.

Mr. Dale

The opening heart lead was ducked in dummy and Mr. Muzzy won with the queen. It occurred to him that, while Mr. Dale probably had the king of spades, Mr. Abel might have the guarded queen.

If so, the underlead of the ace of spades at trick two seemed to him a very clever move. He led the five of spades and Mr. Dale false carded, winning with the king.

Mr. Abel, holding four cards in the suit and having no preference for any other lead, elected to signal with the eight spot. The defenders had started to lay a neat trap—for themselves.

At the third trick Mr. Dale led a heart to dummy's king and Mr. Muzzy won with the ace. Here an alert player would have seen the throw-in coming. He would have got that ace of spades out of his hand fast.

But not Mr. Muzzy. Still being "clever," he underled it again.

Mr. Dale won with the queen and Mr. Abel played the deuce. Now the king of diamonds was cashed. The play of the jack on his right did not surprise Mr. Dale. He had not expected the diamonds to break anyway.

But the play of the spades by both opponents had convinced him that Mr. Muzzy had the lone ace left.

Accordingly, he cashed the jack and ten of hearts. Then he entered dummy with the ace of diamonds and Mr. Muzzy showed out, dropping the six of clubs.

Next came a spade lead and Mr. Muzzy was in with the ace. Holding nothing but clubs at this stage, he found himself in the absurd position of having to lead into dummy's ace-queen.

Thus the three-man team of Dale, Abel and Muzzy managed to make three no trump, winning two spades, two hearts, three diamonds and two clubs.
