North-South vulnerable. North deals.

South tells today's story. The contract was six hearts.

West opened the jack of diamonds. Declarer won with the queen and then ruffed the ace of diamonds to take the trump finesse. When West showed out slight complications set in. Declarer led over to the queen of spades, repeated the trump finesse, and cashed the ace of trumps.

The bidding:

Opening lead: Jack of ♦

Since a heart loser was inevitable the success of the contract depended on finding the club king on side or splitting the spades 3-3, so that a discard could be obtained for one of declarer's clubs. Declarer thereupon played over to the ace of spades and then back to the king on which East discarded a diamond.

Since spades had failed to break declarer must pick up the king of clubs, but first he gave up the trump loser to East. When a diamond came back declarer ruffed and the position was this:

South now cashed the last trump. West had to hold the jack of spades to take care of dummy's three spot. His forced discard was, therefore, the eight of clubs. South led a club and, when West followed with the nine, declarer reached for the ace, with telling effect.

South bowed modestly before partner's generous plaudits. "What a card reader! How did you figure it out?" South's answer was down to earth. "Didn't do much figuring. I happened to remember that West's only remaining card was a spade, therefore, it couldn't be the king of clubs. So what was the use of finessing?"
