The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♦	Pass	Pass	1 ♥
2 ♦	2 ♥	3 ♦	3 ♥
Pass	4 ♥	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Ace of ♦

Today, we present a case in which a desperation lead combined with an orthodox bid provide declarer with the clues required to land an almost hopeless game contract.

When East failed to keep his partner's diamond bid alive it was naturally up to South to act. The conventional procedure with this holding is to make a take-out double.

It was a moral certainty in view of the opening bid that if North and South were to score game it could be only in hearts. If South made the orthodox double North might respond in the major suit and then the king of diamonds would come down in dummy and be attacked in the opening lead.

South therefore decided to bid one heart. West rebid despite partner's pass and North offered a raise. East and South continued the competition but North's final raise to game was overly ambitious.

West opened the ace of diamonds and continued with the queen, putting declarer in with the king. The first problem was the play of the trumps. Holding nine of the suit, the normal procedure is to play for the drop but South made an interesting deduction at trick one.

The lead of the ace of diamonds marked East with the king of spades despite his pass for, if West had held the ace and king of spades he would hardly have given up against the extremity of having to lead from the ace-queen of diamonds.

Since [illegible] is known to have the king of spades, it is hardly likely that he will also show up with the queen of hearts since with that honor holding he would probably have kept the bidding open.

Declarer therefore cashed the king of hearts, followed with the three and, when West played low, South put in the ten from the dummy. After mopping up the trumps, declarer refused the club finesse, dropping the blank king of clubs with his ace on the same line of reasoning that induced him to finesse in trumps. Two spades were discarded from dummy on the long clubs, permitting South to score an overtrick.
