TACKLES BIG BEAR WITH A POLE AXE

Ferryman A. McKinnon Has a Thrilling Encounter With Large Black Bear Near Fort George

Fort George, Dec. 5.—Mr. A. McKinnon, who has had charge of the government ferry running across the Fraser at the Hudson's Bay property for some time past, is recovering from a severe shaking up he received in an encounter with a bear a few days ago. While doing some work on his pre-emption, about five miles east of Fort George, he discovered a bear-hole and decided he would like some bear steaks and a nice rug for his cabin floor to make things more comfortable these cold winter days and night.

As the hole in which Bruin was hibernating was dark inside he took a candle and attached it with a piece of twine to a long pole, then lighted the candle and pushed it into the bear hole, thus giving him light to see inside to get a shot at the animal. He fired two shots and could see that both took effect in the head. As the bear did not attempt to come out he went up on top with an axe to cut a hole down to make sure that the bullets had done their work and to get the carcass out. Mr. Bear made for the opening, and as Mr. McKinnon had left his gun standing against a tree some twenty feet the other side of the bear the hunt began to assume a more interesting phase.

Raising the axe above his head, Mr. McKinnon made a lusty swing and landed on Bruin's head, but, unfortunately, in the excitement, it was the back of the axe instead of the blade that crashed onto the animal's skull. The bear then made a swipe with his foreleg and caught Mr. McKinnon on the hip, tearing his trousers and severely lacerating the muscles of his thigh, also landing him a blow across the chest with the other paw, stripping his vest and shirt open. Realizing that it was a case of do or die, Mr. McKinnon succeeded in getting in another swing with the axe and this time it was the blade that connected with the bear's skull and forced its way into the brain, thus ending an encounter that has thoroughly convinced Mr. McKinnon that the only safe way to tackle a bear is when the animal is hog-tied and chained to a tree.

The hide is one of the largest that has been brought to Fort George, and Mr. McKinnon figures the bear's weight at between 500 and 600 pounds.

COMOX AVENUE THEFT-- TRIAL OF REX VS. HARRIS

her friends that she had only $38 on the very day that she moved into Daisy Lee's place. This money Daisy took and put away and they entered into partnership.

On Wednesday, September 10, the two women counted their money together and the accused, the following day, took her share, leaving Daisy with $728 in her trunk. Shortly afterwards the accused had a severe attack of nerves and on Saturday left for Vancouver. An hour or two later Daisy went to count her money and could not find it. There was no one in the house alone between the time she counted it and the time she missed it.

Evidence would be brought to show that when accused was arrested in Vancouver she had over $350 she could not account for. In her trunk, which was returned from Vancouver unopened, was found $80 sewn up in the buckle of a dress, and a parcel addressed to Fanny Herman—a name used by the accused—at Toronto when returned through the dead letter office was found to contain over $200.

The first witness called was Daisy Lee. The accused shared her house, 825-827 Comox Avenue, from August 29 to September 12, when Lily Harris left for Vancouver. When she first came she was crying and said she did not know what to do. She had only $38 and a ticket to Vancouver. The witness persuaded her to stay, and took the $38 and went into partnership. The accused advised her to take her money out of the bank on account of the war. She did so and kept it in a trunk in her bedroom. The accused was apparently very hard up at the time, having only a few blouses and two dresses. Some of these, produced in court, she identified. On Wednesday they counted their money together and the accused asked for her money. Witness got up early on Thursday to see a friend, and left Lily Harris asleep in her bed. When she returned at 6 a. m. she was still asleep. Accused then got up. Witness went back to bed and was surprised on awakening at 10:30 to find accused dressed up. They usually didn't get up until 12 or 1 o'clock. She said she was going up town and stated very forcibly that she didn't intend to ask permission of the chief of police. She handed over $22, which she said she had obtained from a man. When accused returned from town she seemed very nervous and dispirited. She said her life was not worth two cents—she was not "feeling good." She thought a Turkish bath would do her good, and obtained permission from the police to go up that evening. Witness remarked she would take her money with her. Accused did not think this necessary and later said she felt sick and would not go. On Thursday accused asked for a doctor. Witness left the house for a few minutes and telephoned. Several girls visited the accused. On Friday accused lay in bed all day but next morning, when witness woke up, she had her trunks all packed and said she was going to Vancouver. The doctor had changed her ticket the previous day. Witness saw her off in a taxi and returned home. Shortly afterwards accused telephoned down, "Is there any news there?" The witness said: "No; you have only just left; what do you mean?" Accused then hung up the receiver.

Between 10 and 11 o'clock the same night witness thought of her money and on finding it gone had called the police. She had since found the purse. It was in at the back of the house among the bushes and grass.

In answer to question by Mr. Patmore, she said: No; I never sold liquor in Prince Rupert."

Mr. Patmore: "Then when the accused says your biggest revenue was from liquor she is lying?"

Answer: "Yes."

Mr. Patmore: "You never saw the scavengers picking up stacks of bottles behind your place?"

Witness: "No. I always attend to my own business."

Mr. Patmore: "At the preliminary hearing you stated that you got a letter from George Levy telling you to put your money back in the bank?"

Witness: No. I don't know anyone of that name."

Mr. Patmore: "Didn't the accused read and write letters between you and a man friend?"

Witness: "No. I have no man friend."

Mr. Patmore: "You remember, Billy Chivers committed suicide in Alva O'Neill's house the night before accused was ill. Was he not a friend of hers?"

Witness: "No."

Mr. Patmore: "Were not all the girls very much excited, and didn't they all rush down the street to talk over the suicide?"

Witness: "I don't know. I didn't go out. I saw the others through the window. I believe in minding my own business."

When shown five dollar bills of the Bank of Montreal she was prepared to swear that they were hers. She should not say how she recognized them. They were the same as hers and must be hers.

"Feminine logic," remarked His Lordship.

Mr. Patmore: "Did you not say at the preliminary hearing that among your money you had an American silver dollar?"

Witness: "No. I said I had two American gold pieces, which I wrapped in an American dollar. I couldn't wrap them in a silver dollar."

Mr. Patmore (sarcastically): "Then the stenographers must have poor hearing. Did you not say at the preliminary hearing that it was three—no, two—no, five weeks before accused came to live with you that she advised about taking money from the bank? And now you say ten days?"

Witness: No; I never said that."

Mr. Patmore: "There we are—that stenographer is wrong again."

Re-examined by Mr. Fisher, witness said that accused had four different names, Fanny Herman (her own), Lily Harris, Bertha Cline and Lily Gottlieb.

Alva O'Neil was then called to the stand.

The court was still sitting at the time of going to press.

ANGLICAN RECTORY AT TERRACE CAUGHT FIRE

Terrace, Dec. 5.—Prompt response to the alarm signal given by ringing the church bell saved the Church of England rectory at Terrace from being destroyed by fire last Wednesday morning when one of the partitions of the building became ignited from a heating stove.

Considerable damage was done to the building, although the portent fire extinguishers were almost at once hurried from the business houses of the town and did splendid work in putting out the fire. From the giving of the alarm less than twenty-five minutes elapsed before the building was completely out of danger.

The first sign of fire was a thin smoke coming from the top of the asbestos on the wall back of the stove. Rev. and Mrs. Petter began pouring water against the partition, but the fire had been smouldering between the walls evidently, and had made its way upward too far to be easily checked. When Mr. Petter in an attempt to get at the fire to more advantage broke into the partition with an axe, the result was that the smouldering board broke into flame and it at once became evident that without the assistance of others the fire was beyond control. Mr. Petter then hastened to give the alarm by means of the church bell. When after a few peals of the bell the men who were working on the grading of Kalum Street in sight of the church had heard and responded to the signal, Mr. Petter hurried back to the rectory and endeavored to save as much as possible.

There was quite a wind blowing but fortunately the fire was mainly on the inside of the building where the wind could not get a good sweep at it.

Scarcely any of the furniture was damaged. It is hard to estimate the personal loss, most of which was damage by the water and chemicals.

This is the first building in the town of Terrace to suffer from fire. That there have not been others is purely a stroke of good fortune. It is beginning to have results in a mild epidemic of precaution and preparedness. It is to be hoped that this will result soon in a general movement for adequate fire protection.
