children milled about below. When quiet was restored wonderful refreshments, organized by Mrs. Bill Campbell, were served and the adults visited while the children had another play period with their new toys.

The transportation committee again appeared and happy family groups were driven home. We were invited by several friends to stay overnight but we were afraid the roads would get even worse and decided to return to Kitimat.

Over the planks on the ice to the boat, across the river buffeted by ice floes and crawling back over the icy roads home, we arrived tired but overflowing with the spirit of Christmas.

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
1 ♠	2 ♦	Pass	3 NT
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Deuce of ♣

When an adversary opens the bidding, it is reasonable to presume that outstanding cards are held by him. That does not, however, mean that the location of these cards should be taken for granted if there is a safer method for declarer to attain his ends.

West opened the bidding with one spade and North overcalled with two diamonds. South, tho he held a sound diamond raise, thought it preferable to try three no trump because game in diamonds appeared too remote. North cheerfully accepted his partner's decision.

The deuce of clubs was opened and declarer tock it for granted that West held the king. He played low from dummy and East won. The nine of spades was returned and the suit established by the defense before the ace of diamonds was dislodged. Declarer was unable to bring home nine tricks in time.

Altho the king of clubs is probably in the hand of the opening bidder, the proper play at the first trick is the ace of clubs. If West has the king, he'll have it a minute or two later and, when he is in, will be unable to do more than cash his high honor.

After the ace of clubs is taken, the diamonds are cleared at once and West will continue clubs. East will win the king and return a spade. Declarer will take this, and now he can be reasonably sure that West holds the king of hearts as part of his opening bid, inasmuch as he lacked the king of clubs.

If he is not now content in running his nine tricks, he may go for overtricks by trying the heart finesse. When the king drops on the second round, the rest of the tricks are his.

But at trick one it was vital for declarer not to risk the loss of a valuable time unit.

A COLD SPORT IS ICE FISHING — Joe Groulx, left, and Mervin Spiece, both of Brantford, Ont., beat the cold around their ice hole on Lake Erie. A stove and a plywood windbreak helped them stay on the ice five hours and collect two large baskets of perch. — CP Wirephoto
