Colfax Night celebrated by IOOF, Rebekahs

Colfax Night was celebrated by members of the Rebekahs and Odd Fellows on Wednesday night at Valhalla hall.

Mrs. Frank Grover gave a reading on the life and work of the founder of the Rebekah degree.

Also giving short talks were Harry Quick, district deputy grand master and Mrs. Quick, district deputy president of the Rebekahs.

The noble grand of the Odd Fellows, Mr. Grover, spoke on the work of the lodge.

Entertainment by Wally Jessome on the mouth organ and guitar and Mrs. Nora Thompson on the piano was enjoyed by the members.

Mrs. Knut Nordale won the hidden prize.

Mrs. Nordale and Mrs. Grover conducted the monthly meeting of the Rebekahs held early in the evening at which plans for a coming bake sale were completed. Two members visited the birthday box.

CHANGE IS EXPENSIVE

Opening lead: King of ♠

A mild indiscretion committed by West during the auction in today's hand enabled an alert declarer to uncover a finessing situation which was not readily discernible.

The auction does not get our stamp of approval. Counting an extra point for holding all the aces, South's hand becomes worth 22 points, and should be opened, with two no trump. West's takeout double is not very sound, despite his original pass, for, when East is unable to open the bidding in third position, there can be little hope to score offensively. Altho West has 12 high card points, his distribution is rather unattractive and the queen of diamonds is of questionable value.

East responded to the double by showing his longest suit, clubs, and South made his second questionable decision when he failed to double. While the double in this situation is regarded as optional, North had enough strength in clubs to leave the double in, and with sound defense a 700 point sting could have been inflicted on the opposition.

Against the final contract of three no trump, West opened the king of spades, which was permitted to hold. West continued with the queen and this time declarer played the ace. There were eight top tricks in sight, with a possible ninth available from the long diamond in South's own hand.

The normal procedure is to play three rounds of diamonds in the hope that the suit is divided three-three. From the bidding, however, it appeared to declarer that West was short in diamonds, and he decided to base his play on this assumption.

At trick three, a small diamond was led from the closed hand and, when West followed with a small card, the nine was played from dummy. East was in with the ten of diamonds and he switched to a heart. South put up the ace and led another diamond. This brought forth the queen from West and the king from North.

Declarer now held a tenace over his right hand opponent. The three of diamonds was played from the dummy. East followed with the six and declarer covered with the eight which held the trick as West showed out. South cashed the ace of diamonds and quickly ran for cover with his nine tricks.
