NHL big 7

Boston's John Bucyk picked up a goal and an assist in weekend games to catch up with Frank Mahovlich for leadership in the NHL scoring race while the Toronto ace scored his 26th goal, top in the league.

Both players have 50 points. New York's Andy Bathgate scored a last-minute goal Sunday in Ranger's 4-2 loss to Toronto, remaining in third place with 48 points and second in the goal-scoring department with 23 tallies.

Detroit's Gordie Howe stickhandled through the Boston defence to score his 22nd goal of the season Sunday and also picked up an assist to move up a notch into a fourth-place tie.

Howe and Boston's Murray Oliver, who scored once Saturday night in Bruins' 5-2 win over Toronto, each have 46 points.

GOREN ON BRIDGE

♣ Q 4 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	2 ♡	Double
Redouble	2 ♠	Pass	3 ♠
4 ♡	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Four of ♠

Declarer resorted to an end play to establish an unusual finessing situation for himself in today's hand.

After North raised South's opening one-heart bid to two, East entered the proceedings with a take-out double. He could have simply overcalled with two spades but, holding support in the other suits as well, he wished to offer inducement to his partner to compete on any distributional values. South redoubled and West bid two spades. East's raise to three spades paved the way for a possible save but, when South went on to four hearts, West declined to take the sacrifice.

Failure to bid four spades must be charged to his account as a craven act, for partner has bid up to three entirely on his own steam. West might have had five spades and nothing more. It will be observed that, as declarer, West would have lost one trick in each suit for a very inexpensive 100-point setback.

West opened the four of spades and, after East won the trick with the ace, he shifted to the queen of diamonds. Declarer ducked, but won the continuation with the ace of diamonds. The ace of hearts was cashed and then the seven was led over to North's queen so that South could trump a diamond with the eight of hearts. The deuce of trumps, which had been carefully preserved by the declarer, was now played to the dummy's six, and the last diamond was ruffed away as West followed with the king.

South cashed the king of spades throwing a club from the dummy and, with the side suits stripped away, he was ready to tackle clubs. The normal procedure would be to lead a low club and put in the ten from dummy in the hope that this would force out the ace—in other words, to take a finesse against West for the jack. But inasmuch as West had already shown up with the king of diamonds, declarer decided to play East for both the ace and jack of clubs.

When a small club was led from the closed hand, the king was played from the dummy putting East in with the ace. The latter was obliged to return a club in order to avoid presenting the declarer with a ruff and sluff. South merely permitted the club lead to ride to North's ten, thus restricting his losses to one trick in each of the three side suits.
