MURRAY

He moved that Mr. Gaglardi's letter be referred to the highways committee for study and more concrete action.

When someone suggested that the funds "later in the year" mentioned by Mr. Gaglardi might depend on whether or not an election is called by Premier Bennett, Mr. Murray rose to denounce the government's critics.

He said that chamber members didn't realize the amount of money which had been spent on highways in this area.

Last year, he said, 30 miles of road had been blackstopped, the cannery road had been pushed through for the first time in 84 years and he didn't see where the chamber had any right to carp about 7.14 miles of road that wasn't going to be paved this year.

He said Mr. Scott's suggestion that the letter from Mr. Gaglardi be referred to the highways committee was the "most intelligent one he'd heard," far better than some of the remarks which had been bandied about earlier.

He said some of the remarks about Mr. Gaglardi were "defamatory."

Mr. Murray said he had travelled the Terrace-Prince Rupert section of Highway 16 yesterday, and had checked on the amount of rip-rapping that would be necessary to make paving of some of the sections along the Skeena feasible.

He said chamber members didn't realize how much rock is necessary to keep the road from sliding into the river.

"It would be utter futility to pave right now," Mr. Murray said.

Mr. Gaglardi's letter was referred to the highways committee for study before another protest is drafted.

BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

The squeeze play is probably the favorite play of the serious students of the game, but the end-play or throw-in has wider popularity because it comes up much more frequently.

How to recognize the opportunity for an end-play and how to execute it successfully will be our theme in this and several following columns.

Today's hand is a simple one but it illustrates a basic principle or two. Playing a four-spade contract, Mr. Dale had one loser in hearts and as many as three losers in clubs if he led that suit himself.

How convenient and profitable it would be if he could arrange to have the enemy start the clubs.

Mr. Dale

He got a favorable lead, a trump, and he won with the king. He laid down the ace of spades, then cashed four rounds of diamonds exhausting the defenders of a second suit.

Next he led his lone ten of hearts and Mr. Abel won with the jack.

Examine the situation at this point. Mr. Abel had only hearts and clubs left in his hand. If he led the ace of clubs Mr. Dale would naturally play small from his own hand and from the dummy. Then he would be certain of winning the third round of the suit with the queen.

If Mr. Abel led a low club, his partner would have to play the king (or not win the trick), and again Mr. Dale would play low from his hand and the board and be sure of winning the third round.

Actually, Mr. Abel didn't return a club. He led a heart, hoping there was one more in the closed hand. But Mr. Dale ruffed in dummy and discarded a club from his hand.

In effect he got to discard one of his club losers on one of dummy's trumps.

The essence of this play is to strip every possible card from the opponents' hands before surrendering the lead. If Mr. Dale had not played out his diamonds in this hand before putting Mr. Abel in with a heart, he would have had no advantage at all.

Mr. Abel would simply have returned a diamond without damage to his side. And Mr. Dale would have had to play the clubs himself, losing a total of three tricks in that suit.
