Anaemia

Thin, watery blood is no more nourishing than thin, watery milk—skim milk.

But you can soon enrich thin blood, overcome the anaemic condition and build up the whole system by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Mrs. F. G. Simmons, 42 Curl St., Brantford, Ont., writes:

"For about eight years I suffered from anaemia. My circulation was poor, my gums and lips were pale, and my hands and feet were always cold. I was nervous and unable to sleep well. I had frequent headaches, seemed restless and easily worried or irritated. There was a buzzing sound in my ears. Indigestion was also one of my complaints, and I often was attacked by weak spells. I went to a doctor, who told me I was anaemic, but as I did not get any better I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after the first box I felt lighter and my headaches completely disappeared. I continued using the Nerve Food for quite a while. I am quite well now, and cheerfully and gratefully recommend Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to people suffering as I did before I used this splendid medicine."

FARMERS PROTEST AT USING LIQUOR MONEY

FREDERICTON, March 2.—A resolution strongly protesting against the licensing of the liquor traffic by the provincial government of New Brunswick as a means of raising revenue and calling upon the Government to practice economy to relieve the present financial situation, was passed by the United Farmers of New Brunswick in session here.

The farmers object to liquor money as tainted money and prefer to do without public works rather than use money obtained from such a source.

DO YOU SMOKE TOO MUCH

There are many men on whose heart and nervous system tobacco produces the most serious results. It causes palpitation, pain in the heart, irregularity of its beat, makes the hands tremble, sets the nerves on edge, causes shortness of breath and loss of sleep.

To counteract this demoralizing influence on the heart and nerves there is no remedy to equal

MILBURN'S HEART AND NERVE PILLS

They make the heart beat strong and steady, restore tone and vigor to the nerves, and remove all the evil results caused by the tobacco.

Mr. Frank Lutes, 71 Terrace Hill St., Brantford, Ont., writes:—"I had been troubled with palpitation of the heart for a number of years, and by spells it would bother me a lot. The doctor told me it would stop on me some time if I did not cut out tobacco. When I would get a spell my heart would pound, and I would break out in a perspiration, and get so weak I would have to sit right down and quit my work; also in the night I would wake up and my heart would be going, I should say, about 120 beats a minute. About three years ago I got a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, took them, and found that they did the job. I am feeling fine and have gained over 20 pounds in weight."

INHERITANCE TAX PROPOSED

WASHINGTON, March 2.—(By Canadian Press.)—The tangle over the question of how to raise the funds to meet the proposed bonus for United States war veterans has caused a good many members of Congress to give serious thought to the inheritance tax, along with a tax on gifts calculated to prevent evasion of the inheritance tax.

This has in turn led to a study of the British inheritance taxes, and it is found that if Congress should impose rates on estates on the same basis as the British rates it would be possible through this source to raise about $750,000,000. The British Government raises $232,000,000 in this manner from estates which in the aggregate are far below the value of the estates which in the United States would be subject to this tax.

Advocates of the inheritance tax say it could be imposed without hardship and without serious political protest. It is pointed out that there is little evidence of public opposition in the United Kingdom to the inheritance tax, whatever may be the feeling toward it of a small percentage of the wealthy.

President Harding's recent declaration that the bonus question had better be shelved unless the money is raised through a sales tax has met with a mixed reception. In spite of President Harding's recommendation and a great deal of testimony from advocates of the sales tax to the effect that it works well in Canada, it is distinctly unpopular with many legislators here and is bitterly opposed by the farmers and the laboring men. It is doubtful if a sales tax can be forced through, and if it were it would undoubtedly prove hurtful to the party in power.

Farmer Bloc.

Talk is current of an alliance of the farm bloc, labor and Democrats in Congress to drive through the inheritance tax. Representative Ramseyer of Iowa has introduced a comprehensive bill under which the rates on estates would range from 1 per cent. on estates above $25,000 net to 40 per cent. above $10,000,000. Any such plan is sure to encounter bitter opposition from the eastern states, which have the greatest wealth. With the great majority of the voters it would be popular. Unless a practicable way is soon found of meeting the bonus question—which may be shunted aside but will not down—it is not unlikely a determined drive will be made to force the inheritance tax through. It is true, of course, that under present law there is a mild estate or inheritance tax in the United States, but what is now proposed is a tax of such proportions that it would actually have important effects in tending to hold down great family fortunes.

NATION-WIDE EFFORT AGAINST DRUG TRAFFIC

Sir Hugh John Macdonald and Chief Newton of Winnipeg Declare in Favor of Move.

WINNIPEG, March 2.—Sir Hugh John Macdonald, police magistrate, and Chief Constable Chris Newton, today declared they would support a nation-wide citizen effort to combat the drug traffic. Steps are now being taken in Vancouver to form a national organization to fight the illegal distribution of drugs.

Chief Newton said the drug traffic was active in Winnipeg and that police found it necessary to be continually on the watch for peddlers. There is not the organized effort to peddle drugs here that there is in Vancouver, according to Chief Newton, but large quantities of drugs are brought in from Vancouver and St. Paul and Minnapolis.

Chief Newton declared that the drug traffic will never be successfully fought until courts cease to deal leniently with offenders. The chief advocates that sentences as long as five years be imposed on offenders, or fines totalling at least $2,000 levied.

The use of drugs in Winnipeg is on the increase, according to Chief Newton.

1000 WOMEN AND GIRLS AT ROYAL WEDDING

Rich Variety of Gowns Seen There of Great Interest to Lady Readers.

LONDON, March 2.—(The Associated Press)—About 1,000 women and girls were among the elect made happy by receipt of invitations to Princess Mary's wedding to Viscount Lascelles at Westminster Abbey, Tuesday. With them the all-important questions were "What shall I wear?" and "What will the bridal party wear?"

Within certain limits, the State Chamberlain, who designates the form of apparel for state occasions, settled the matter. He prescribed "morning dress with hats, also orders and decorations." Dressmakers carried the thing a bit further by announcing that it would be a "brocade" wedding, that material being favored by several of those socially prominent women whose selections usually govern.

The State Chamberlain's ukase ruled out the wearing of veils, plumes and trains. In the interests of economy, this had been the rule at the Court of St. James since early in the war. The result was some dimunition of brilliancy, but the sacrifice contributed to the comfort of the feminine part of the wedding congregation as Westminster Abbey has long been termed "a vast collection of draughts."

The choice of morning dress was made "in view of probable cold weather and the continued prevalence of the influenza epidemic." It is recalled that many women who attended the wedding of Princess Patricia at the Abbey three years ago, when more elaborate and less protective "court" dress was worn, were almost blue with cold before the two hours' ceremony ended.

Cloaks and Furs.

"Morning" dress, of course, necessitates the wearing of cloaks and furs. Officers of the Army, Navy and Air Force wore full dress uniform, with colors and decorations. For civilians, Court dress was prescribed. Swords were part of this attire. Soldiers without dress uniform were permitted to use service kit.

Brocade has been increasing in popularity for some time. Now it is all the rage and the wedding party afforded a gorgeous display of this material in all its rich variety. There were brocades of misty blue, of dull gold and shimmering silver. The pattern, in most cases, was Elizabethan and the effect one of rare splendor.

Some of the materials displayed at exhibitions held inWest End modistes' salons before the wedding were marvellous examples of weaving. To vary the plain gold or silver figuring, delicate hydranges colorings were introduced and pretty "shot" effects achieved. Here and there stronger colors were seen—true jade, for instance, and aquamarine—an approximate definition, for this particular shading is so subtle as to defy accurate classification.

One classically draped model in crepe-faced silver cloth was festooned from the shouders with chains of large cut jet beads. A jet girdle set with brilliants was looped round the hips and trailing clouds of black tulle served as transparent substitutes for sleeves.

Classic Outline

Many of the frocks were classic in outline, long waisted and with fairly full skirts reaching nearly to the ankles.

As to the extent of the decolletage permissable, no specific instructions were issued, but it was well known that Queen Mary disliked exaggeration in any particular of feminine attire.

A gown of handsome silver lace, with the necessary matt surface, was sewn with pearls—festooned with them—this magnificent overdress being imposed on a foundation of silver tissue.

Yet another had a surface of platinum paillettes with lapis lazuli paillettes used to give a mosaic effect, the whole being partially veiled in moonlight-blue tulle.

But satin was not altogether ruled out. A frock of jade "satin Anglais" with a sparkling diamond and pearl corselet hung with chains of diamonds was seen.

Revival of Sleeves

As to sleeves, the edict declared that a revival of sleeves was certain. This, it is understood, was in deference to a wish expressed by Queen Mary and pertained to Court dress more especially than to gowns for the Princess' wedding.

Inclusion of the words "with hats" in the State Chamberlain's dress specifications was perhaps more welcome news to milliners than to those attending the Abbey service—certainly the male contingent was not overjoyed. Most of them, and many women, were fearful the hats in front of them at the Abbey would obstruct their view. This consideration, apparently, was taken into account at most shops and a variety of specially designed small hats and toques was displayed to minimize this disadvantage.

"Toques of Russian satin, gauze, lace, chenille and silk straw were trimmed with ribbons, embroideries and flowers, and many of them had long pendants of beads, ribbons or semi-precious stones hanging down on one or both sides."

Adoption of the turban modes of the late 18th and early 19th centuries—flashing affairs of gold and silver trimmed perhaps, with a paradise plume held by a jewelled clasp—would have added to the general gorgeousness of the scene. These turbans accorded with the popular gold and silver dress materials.

As fur coats, or cloaks with furs, were generally worn, a problem with milliners was to create headwear that would harmonize not only with brilliant dress, but with a wrap of sable or moleskin.

Furriers and cloak-makers shared in the fillip given London's dressmaking industry by the wedding and the season of social functions incidental thereto. Model cloaks of apricot velvet embroidered in diamonds and jet and collared with white fox; of black velvet trimmed with kolinsky; of ermine allied with sable; of mole and gold brocade with a flounce of fluffy marabou strands and collars of the same material were seen.

AS A MATTER OF FACT

The idea that chemicals are injurious, merely because they are chemicals, is erroneous.

We live on chemicals. The air we breathe is a mixture of oxygen, nitrogen and certain inert gases, as is also the water we drink a chemical compound of hydrogen and oxygen.

Like most everything in the world, however, there are good and bad chemicals, as well as good and bad laundries.

The good chemicals are those we eat drink and breathe—the kind WE use in the laundry to keep us clean. The harmful chemicals are the poisonous gases and compounds we are all familiar with.

We would not think of using the harmful chemicals in our homes; why not give our clothing the same intelligent consideration, and send them to the laundry where this chemical principle is recognized, and where only the good chemicals are used?

This service is at your disposal.
