Sing Anthem And Revere The Flag.

Speaking recently at Washington President Harding urged that every citizen of the United States should learn to sing the national anthem, be taught to revere the flag and to maintain unimpaired the things for which the flag stands.

Possibly this might be a lesson for us. Most of us can sing the British national anthem but few know the Canadian anthem and sections of the people throughout the country each sing a different version. Possibly the best version has not yet been written but it is a pity all cannot agree on some verses now in use. The Canadian Club has made laudable efforts with this end in view but not yet with marked success. To sing the anthem and revere the flag is a great impetus toward unity of purpose. Even those who believe in the greater internationalism of the future, as most people today do, can still be loyal to their own country.

Stand At Attention In Singing Anthem.

The American people are advised from time to time as to how they shall honor the flag of their country and as to their duties toward the state. Possibly here we do too little of that sort of thing. We are apt to look with a certain amount of contempt on those who make outward displays of their loyalty.

Those who have noticed the War Veterans or a regiment of soldiers stand at attention when singing the national anthem have been struck with the effect. The moment the first strains of the music are heard, the men straighten up and their hands come to their sides. It is a treat to watch them. The comparison with the person who slouches to his feet and leans against a post while the anthem is being sung is most noticeable.

We owe it to the symbol of our nation to pay respect to the flag and to the song which should be the crystalizing of our national spirit. The person who honors his country is the real internationalist, for he can never be loyal to a world state unless he first learns to be loyal to his family, his province, and his country. If we are to be a great people we must learn to be a unit on great things and the flag and the anthem are the symbols of those.

Those Who Leave During Singing.

There are a few Marxian socialists who refuse to sing a national anthem and who may always be seen making for the door the moment the anthem is commenced. Nothing but pity can be felt for those whose mental outlook is so restricted that they cannot see that even in a socialist community there would have to be loyalty in order to insure success. The man who is not loyal to his country will not be loyal to the great cause of the workers or to any other cause.

People are gregarious. They live in communities. As long as they do this there must be a binding force, else there can be no unity of purpose and no hope of success in anything that is undertaken.

Union Of Forces May Come Into Effect.

Some day there may be unity of forces which make for advancenrent. It is not at all improbable that the English speaking world may unite for a common purpose, not temporarily but permanently. If ever there is to be a world state, it will have to come, not through disintegration of present national boundaries but in the extension of those boundaries. Germans had a dream of a world state which should be Germany and the ideal would have been all right if it had not been selfish. So, many have a dream of Anglo Saxon dominance. Neither of these can succeed. There must be no dominance. It is because of the absence of the note of dominance that the British people have been able to hold together and to hold other nations with them. Possibly as time goes on the English speaking nations may become the core of a world state of which all other nations will become a part. If so there will have to be a lot of unselfish work done and a great deal of breaking down, not so much of national barriers, but of fiscal and racial barriers.

A WEEK AT THEATRE

Monday only.
"Pink Gods." A love drama.
Comedy "Play Ball."
"No More Gasoline."

Tuesday.
Elks Minstrels and Vaudeville.

Wednesday and Thursday.
"Trifling Women." A Rex Ingram production.
Comedy "Chop Suey."

Friday and Saturday and Saturday Matinee.
Rex Ingram presents "The Prisoner of Zenda."
Century Comedy "Tattle Tales."
Fox News Gazette.

All the shows billed here this week have been put on at the Capitol Theatre, Vancouver.

The Allens are still in possession of the Allen theatres and they have leased the buildings to the Famous Players with a guaranteed dividend of seven per cent.

The story of Lady Hamilton and Admiral Nelson is being told in picture. The story is fiction based on fact.

"The Man Next Door" is a story of cow punchers and society folks with a strong love theme.

Wandering Daughters is a story of flappers and their problems.

The California clergy are taking exception to Chaplin's new comedy "The Pilgrim." That of course means that the public will flock to see it.

Al. Jolson, comedian, is to help make a big Griffith comedy. It should be something better than the ordinary if an actor's reputation helps at all.

Jack London's Abysmal Brute is being shown with success, the appeal being made very largely to those who follow prize fights.

Day by day in every way the Coue film is getting popular and more popular among audiences.

DIAMOND MINES SEEN IN PINK GODS FILM

The scenes in Pink Gods at the Westholme tonight are laid in South Africa, and the picture is based on Cynthia Stockley's novel —"Pink Gods and Blue Demons." The author is thoroughly familiar with the great diamond mines for she envelops her story in a wealth of picturesque detail.

Bebe Daniels is excellent as the leading woman in the part of Lorraine Temple, who cannot resist the temptation to bedeck herself with fine jewelry. A strange fascination that not only conquers her but also brings about a series of thrilling adventures! James Kirkwood is leading man and Anna Q. Nilsson and Raymond Hatton have important roles.

TRIFLING WOMEN IS STORY OF ZAREDA THE CRYSTAL GAZER

The new Rex Ingram film, Trifling Women, which is to be here Wednesday combines the elements of excellence that have stamped him as one of the hopefuls of the screen. It has the dramatic thrill of "The Four Horseman;" the romantic beauty of "The Prisoner of Zenda," and the suspense of "The Conquering Power." It has, too, what each of these photoplays had; remarkable attention to details, supreme good taste and intelligence, and an uncanny gift for pungent characterization.

"Trifling Women" is a story within a story. In order to point a moral to his pleasure-loving and frivolous daughter, who ignores a devoted lover, her author-father reads to her the manuscript of his new novel, the story of Zareda, the crystal gazer. He recounts the woman's terrific fascination, which leads brother to conspire against brother, and father against son. He tells how Zareda's hold on an old Baron, whose son Ivan, too, shares her favors; of the young man's departure to war; of the Baron's death at Zareda's instigation; of Ivan's return and his discovery that she has married a wealthy Marquis for his money; and, finally, of the illicit love of Ivan and Zareda, costing them their lives in the Sorcerer's Tower.

PRISONER OF ZENDA FEATURE OF THE WEEK

Well Known Story Shown In Picture This Week End Here

The "Prisoner of Zenda" is the week-end picture here. It is a story teeming with dramatic action, full of intrigue, romance and excitement. It concerns the adventures of an English gentleman, one Rudolf Rassendyll, who, because of a remarkable likeness to the ruler of the mythical kingdom of Ruritania, becomes for a time its actual ruler and wins the love of the Princess Flavia.

The Prisoner of Zenda is the most popular romance of a generation. From the time when Anthony Hope, then more interested in his political career in England than in writing, composed it, the narrative of Rudolf Rassendyll's reckless adventure has taken hold of the hearts of all who read. This was the first of the stories of romance in little kingdoms in Europe, and no better indication can be had of its success than that it inspired hundreds of writers to imitate it. But none of the resulting stories had the zest, the devil-may-care spirit of the original, for that was written chiefly for the love of imagination the author had; it was as glamorous to him as to his readers.

The Prisoner of Zenda has stepped out of the pages of the book and come very much to life on the screen. Different essentially from "The Four Horsemen," as different as realism is from romance, the newer picture nevertheless has been done upon the same great scale and with the same faithfulness to the spirit of the written page.

PARADE TO ADVERTISE BIG MINSTREL SHOW WESTHOLME TOMORROW

The Elks are preparing to advertise their big minstrel show Tuesday night by a parade through the streets.

It is expected that there will be a large attendance for the event because of the promise of a "simply wonderful time" that the Elks minstrels always give those who attend their performances. This time it is said the black face artists will outdo all former efforts in the real funniness of their humor and in the topical and other songs.

The playlet at the close is something different from what has been seen here before.

The proceeds are for the Nurses' Home.

J. E. Miller, inspector of customs and excise, and T. Mason, assistant inspector, were passengers going through from Victoria to Dawson on the Princess Louise this morning.

Dr. CHASE'S LINIMENT

Yes Betty I can meet you at 10 o'clock!

"Since I started using Sunlight Soap I find I can get my clothes beautifully washed with my washing machine in fifteen or twenty minutes. Isn't that wonderful? And my clothes are such a beautiful color too.

How do I use Sunlight? I pare half a cake or so of Sunlight in very thin slices, into the hot water in the washing machine, stir it up into a lovely rich suds, then pop in the clothes, and let Sunlight and the machine do the work! Then the rinsing—and the clothes line. Really Betty—washing clothes with Sunlight is good fun—it's all over in less than an hour."

Sunlight's unusual value comes from the skilful blend of pure, rich cocoanut and palm oils. These are the best soap making ingredients that the world produces.
