Waterfront Whiffs

"Better than ever." According to advices received in secret service circles the tame decoy duck, which Jack has under his wing, is being licked into shape and when the wild ducks become a little wilder Jack promises them a good time.

A clean up in Cow Bay creek would seem to be a very desirable undertaking by someone in authority. Just now the creek is littered with a bunch of old derelict hulls and doubtless good work could be done with a box of matches and a can of coal oil if the junk were removed to some suitable location for burning. Boatbuilders in that vicinity are desirous of installing ship ways, etc, but cannot get to the waters edge for the amount of rotten lumber lying about, doubtless in the remote past called boats. It seems a pity to hinder commercial progress through lack of the proper use of a box of matches.

Trouble Ended

Capt. Benson, after many years of mechanical trials and tribulations with his speed boat Poinsettia, has given the knockout blow to past worries by installing a new Ford marine engine therein. Unless someone throws a monkey wrench into the works, which is very unlikely, it is on the cards that the Poinsettia will lead this summer and others will try to follow. The engine has been given a trial run and everything is working as fine as a piece of cut glass under a freight train. All Ben has to do now is to give her the gas and one turn of the flywheel and Henry Ford does the rest. Ben says, "Watch my smoke."

The 15 horse power heavy duty Buffalo engine, which is to be installed in the launch Five Roses, is being tuned up by skipper Rose preparatory to being fitted in the boat. It is expected the installation work will be completed in a few days.

The halibut boat Osumi is being transformed into a seining boat at the McLean yards. A winch and turn table is being installed.

The power boat Cumshewa, owned by the Rupert Marine Products, Ltd., Tucks Inlet, is undergoing an engine overhaul at the hands of Harry Love.

Capt. Claude Leigh, of Seal Cove fame, is out behind the island on his power boat Hesquit fishing for shrimps.

The Towena, Capt. J. Field, is now employed in the general towing business for the Georgetown mill.

Celebrities Leaving

Two waterfront celebrities are leaving the city shortly to seek commercial pastures new in the person of Bill Shrubsall, of smoked cod fame, and Jack Toner the man who put the "T" in Irish. Bill and Mrs. Shrubsall are leaving on the Cardena on Tuesday evening for Vancouver en route to Boston. While in Vancouver Mr. and Mrs. Shrubsall will visit with their niece for a short while. Jack Toner is going to New York and will probably join the Tammany Hall gang to assist in the forthcoming presidential elections. The nautical fraternity will greatly miss the genial presence of Bill Shrubsall and the wonderful hospitality of Mrs. Shrubsall. Many have been the pleasant evenings spent under the hospitable roof by nauticals, and their intention to leave the city has been received with much regret by those who know them both so well. However, all wish them long life and happiness and future prosperity in their new surroundings. Jack Toner, always a famous character in nautical circles, will also be missed. Many has been the laugh had in these columns at Jack and his doings. He always took everything in good part being blessed with a high sense of Irish humor, and extended much good fellowship to his comrades when located at Cow Bay. The boys wish Jack every good fortune in his future undertakings.

Some Fisherman

Always of a cheerful disposition Capt. Cy Swanson, of the schooner Tillie S. wore a particularly broad grin on Thursday morning, and upon inquiries being made at the Mosquito admiralty offices it was learned that Cap had picked up a nice little catch of 15,000 pounds of halibut on his last trip which went at a good price to the Atlin Fisheries hence the face registering mirth. Someone tried to get the secret of the good catch from Cap but he just winked and said "It's all in the way you hold your mouth."

Capt. Brandy Newell of the schooner Atli is wearing a wicked frown these days and he sure has reason to be sore. Some light fingered artist swiped a sail and mast out of his skiff the other night and thus put the power on the blink. Cap hopes that the user of the sail will be blown to the place where snowballs melt before they become frozen.

Skipper George Newcomb is busy fixing up the launch Lilly, which he recently purchased. A 3½ h.p. Perfection engine is being installed and the hull and interior fixed up. The canopy top has also been re-canvassed.

The Imperial Oil Company have just completed the erection of two additional small oil tanks.
