SWEDE PRINCE MARRIES RICH ENGLISH GIRL

Daughter of Prince Louis of Battenburg Became Bride in London Today

LONDON, Nov. 3.—Before the ancient altar of the little Chapel Royal in St. James' Palace, where many a king and queen has been wedded since the days of Henry VIII., Crown Prince Gustave Adolph of Sweden took as his second bride this afternoon Lady Louise Mountbatten, niece of the reigning British sovereign.

Lady Louise is a sister of Lord Louis Mountbatten who last year married Miss Edwina Ashly, said to be one of the richest women in England. Lord Louis and his bride spent part of their honeymoon in the United States.

It was an eventful wooing which led to the wedding in the Chapel Royal of St. James' Palace. Scarcely had the news of Gustaf Adolf's engagement been announced when it was reported that certain authorities in Sweden opposed the marriage on the ground that Lady Louise was not of sufficiently high rank to marry the crown prince. Then, while the genealogical experts were settling this question in favor of the bride-to-be, came the startling news that the press of foreign lands was broadcasting the tale that Lady Louise had changed her mind about becoming a crown princess anyway, and was going to marry an obscure English painter of modest income. But as the summer passed by these rumors were gradually discredited by the fact that Lady Louise and the Swedish Crown Prince were often seen together in England and France.

Bride's Father

Lady Louise's father was Prince Louis of Battenberg, later known as the Marquis of Milford-Haven. The Battenburg family has sprung from Germany by way of Austria, where the title of prince was bestowed, and because of strained feeling in England during the war the name was anglicized to Mountbatten. Lady Louise, who is about 35 years old, is a typical aristocratic Englishwoman, gracious, generous, alert, fond of dancing and outdoor sport, and gifted with genuine charm. She will captivate Sweden as she did the officers and sailors of the Swedish squadron visiting British waters when she came aboard the flagship escorted by the crown prince.

The Swedish Crown Prince, whose full name is Oscar Fredrik Wilhelm Olaf Gustaf Adolf, has been married before, his first wife having died some three years ago. Crown Princess Margaret, daughter of the Duke of Connaught and princess of Great Britain and Ireland, had borne Gustaf Adolf five children, and her death was a great bereavement to the Swedish people.

41 Years Old

Gustaf Adolf is now 41 years of age, more than six feet tall, as are all the men of the Swedish royal family, and vigorous as an athlete. Indeed he is the possessor of the "athletic medal" awarded only for high proficiency in at least five different branches of sport in Sweden. This is perhaps not strange, nor is it strange that he is a military leader, and that he should have commanded one of his country's armies in the field manoeuvers which ended only two weeks before the wedding. But it may surprise many that the Swedish crown prince is also a serious archaeologist, with several expeditions to his credit. Last year he spent nearly two months personally directing the excavation of the buried Greek town of Asine, and unearthed many precious relics that shed light on the civilization of 3,000 years ago. He is, moreover, a collector of paintings, especially of the work of modern artists, such as Anders Zorn and Carl Larsson. Gustaf Adolf is very democratic and, consequently, popular with the masses in Sweden. His political aims and principles, like those of his father, are sound and constructive.

The wedding in London was attended by both King George of England and King Gustaf of Sweden. The couple will spend their honeymoon in Italy.
