Premier urges investors to study B.C.

LONDON (CP)—Premier W. A. C. Bennett of British Columbia, who arrived in London Tuesday for two weeks of talks with bankers and industrialists, has invited British investors to have a good look at his province.

"We have a lot of American and Canadian investment in our country and we are most anxious that Britain have her share."

The premier told reporters:

British Columbia's population is increasing 50 per cent above the Canadian average and, he added "our country is the most British part of Canada."

With the premier are Dr. J. V. Fisher, the province's economic adviser; G. S. Dryson, deputy finance minister and G. D. Ekman, executive assistant to the premier.

221 candidates set for election

REGINA (CP)— Saskatchewan's four main political parties are to contest all 54 seats in the June 8 general election, the biggest turnout on record.

A total of 221 candidates filed official nomination papers Tuesday in 48 of 49 constituencies. Nomination day is June 13 in the northern riding of Athabaska which votes June 29 because of late spring breakup.

Full slates were nominated by the CCF party, in power since 1944, Liberals, Progressive Conservatives and Social Credit.

Three independents and two Communists also filed nomination papers.

The CCF party held 36 of 53 seats in the last legislature. The Liberals had 13 seats and Social Credit three. The Progressive Conservative Party, which ran 10 candidates in the last general election in 1956, was not represented in the House.

TOO MANY

As we bowed our sayonaras, Mr. Takenaka said he would go home happy to the birthday party his children had arranged for him. But, first, could he help me in any way, give me directions?

And so I said goodbye to my new Japanese friend, the rain pouring down on us in busy, exciting Isezaki-Cho, in the heart of Yokohama, and I took one of those mad Japanese taxi rides back to South Pier, where I boarded P & O —Orient Lines' Chusan, in which I was to sail back across the Pacific to Vancouver.

I must send Mr. Takenaka a card from Honolulu—he'll like that very much.

Universities or university colleges in Britain had 102,500 full-time scholars in 1958, double the total for 1939.

Blackwood on BRIDGE
By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

"What's trump?" inquired Mr. Muzzy as Mrs. Keen's opening lead, the king of diamonds, hit the table.

"Clubs . . . five clubs," screamed Mr. Champion. "We just finished bidding it two seconds ago."

Thus, in the customary spirit of confidence and harmony, the Muzzy - Champion combination started off another hand.

Mrs. Keen won the first trick with the king of diamonds and, when she saw the dummy, switched to the nine of spades.

The five was played from dummy and Miss Brash won with the king and returned her singleton heart. Mr. Muzzy bounced up with the ace of hearts and winked at Mr. Champion, which was supposed to mean that everything was under control.

Mr. Muzzy

Mr. Champion responded to this pleasantry with a stony stare. He figures (and quite correctly) that when Mr. Muzzy is playing a hand, the time to relax is after the contract has been made and entered on the score.

Mr. Muzzy took three rounds of trumps to make sure they were all out and then spread the hand, claiming his contract. "As advertised," he said wittily.

Mrs. Keen remarked that she thought the hand should be played out.

"Why it's cold," answered Mr. Muzzy bravely, although now there was a hint of doubt in his voice. "I'm trumping my two losing diamonds in dummy."

"Indubitably," persisted Mrs. Keen, "but may I ask you what you are planning to do with the seven of hearts?"

"I'll tell you what he's going to do with it," put in Mr. Champion. "He's going to lose it."

That was right, of course. There was no way to avoid the loss of a heart trick to Mrs. Keen's jack.

Mr. Champion forcefully explained that Mr. Muzzy should have played dummy's ace of spades at trick two instead of risking the finesse.

Then he could have entered his hand twice with clubs to lead his two remaining diamonds and ruff them on the board.

Now two hearts would show up the situation in that suit.

At that point the lead of a spade would put Miss Brash in.

She would have only spades and diamonds left and the return of either suit would enable Mr. Muzzy to discard his losing heart while ruffing in dummy.
