Camployment increasing

Employment opportunities for the University of British Columbia's 1959 graduating class have showed a noticeable increase over last year, according to UBC

But aummer employment still remains a problem, according to John F. McLean, director of personnel services. "The situation has improved somewhat over the past wook to ten days," he said, "but we still have more than students registered for [summer Jobs."

He appoiled to employers anywhere in the province to contact UIC's employment bureau they have jobs available.

Bolween 80 and 90 per cent of the 1989 graduating class o more than 1.000 students have already found employment, according to Mr. McLenn, Hel described the graduate employment situation as "quite good, cortainly much bottor than last
