CPR Unions Resume Wage Talks

MONTREAL (CP) — Negotiations resumed today between Canadian Pacific Railway officials and representatives of 17 non-operating railway workers unions seeking to work out a new wage contract with two Federal conciliators sitting in on the sessions.

The negotiations are behind closed doors and sessions are expected to continue all week with little likelihood of any immediate statement from either side.

Widow Rebuilds Blitzed Home

LONDON (CP)—More than 50 proposals of marriage and a stream of congratulatory messages have poured in on 74-year-old Mrs. Edith Binge, of London's working-class district of Poplar.

It all started when word got around she had single-handed and without a government permit completed the re-building of her blitzed home—a 12-year task.

The house, reconstructed from a pile of rubble, was one of many destroyed by a high explosive bomb dropped during the Battle of Britain in 1940. Mrs. Binge, a widow whose only son was serving in the army, was in a nearby shelter when the bomb struck.

When she emerged she found only one room of her home habitable. The next day she put up a waterproof roof and set about re-building. It took her a year to clear the debris and sort it out. Then she cleaned the retrieved bricks, bought sacks of cement and sand, re-shaped the timber and did the plumbing and electrical work all by herself.

Mrs. Binge insisted the job could have been completed much sooner but for the fact she had to confine her operations to what was left of her meagre old age pension.

Member of the Poplar Housing Committee, Councillor E. H. Smith, said Mrs. Binge had established something of a precident in getting her home together without once filling out a form and seeking permission from the authorities. Normally, a minimum of five permits is needed to start building.

As for the proposals of marriage, Mrs. Ginge put them away.

"For the rest of my days I think I shall prefer my own home," she said.

Puzzling Play May Be Suit

Preference Signal to Partner

"If only I were twins," said Mr. Champion modestly, "the team of Champion and Champion would be unbeatable."

This remark stemmed from the fact that Mr. Champion had told Mr. Abel, by means of a suit preference signal, how to beat the hand. But Mr. Abel had muffed it.

One way to "catch" suit preference signals is to be on the alert for unusual plays by partner, plays that puzzle you, plays which seem downright silly. Of course, you have to have a good partner. If Mr. Muzzy made such a play, it would BE silly.

But playing with Mr. Champion, you know that any unusual play he makes is for a specific purpose, probably the purpose of giving you information.

In today's deal Mr. Abel opened the king of spades and Mr. Champion followed suit with the deuce. Mr. Abel wondered momentarily whether that deuce had any deep, special significance. Finally, he properly decided that it showed nothing but a complete lack of interest in the spade suit.

He could see no reason to shift at this point and continued with the ace of spades. On this trick, Mr. Champion played the NINE of spades. This puzzled Mr. Abel.

His partner surely had not started with only two spades and surely did not have the queen of spades because, in either case, he would have played high-low to ask for continuation of the suit.

Of course Mr. Champion was giving a suit preference signal. Having got it in the record that he was interested in the spade suit itself by the play of the deuce at trick one, he next played the nine, an unnecessarily high card. He was trying to say, "Lead the higher of the other two plain suits."

After puzzling over this for a while, Mr. Abel came to the conclusion that he didn't know what the nine of spades means and he shifted to the eight of clubs.

Mr. Dale won with the ace, cashed three top hearts, then the king and queen of clubs. On the third club lead he ditched his diamond. Mr. Abel ruffed but that was just the third—and last—trick for the defenders.

Teaching Taught At Summer Schools

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Department of Education hopes a six-week summer course may help to solve the present shortage of public school teachers.

At present 500 grade 12 graduates are learning the intricacies of teaching in a pre-teachers college which has been established for the summer at Bloor Collegiate.

Ontario needs 1,000 new teachers annually and Dr. J. G. Althouse, chief director of education, said he hopes this new development may at least supply a temporary answer.

"The new course assures a supply of teachers without granting so-called cheap certificates," he said.

Normal Schools turn out 1,700 new teachers annually, not enough to relieve the constant pressure. Through the pre-teachers school, grade 12 graduates, previously not admitted to Normal Schools now can take two successive summer sessions in Toronto, and by teaching during the winter, qualify for admittance to Normal School.

At present 94 boys, 382 girls and 30 Roman Catholic nuns are taking the course. Three Mennonites are in the group.
