BLACKWOOD on Bridge

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Muzzy Waits Too Long, Loses Chance for Slam

Here is another part score bidding situation. Mr. Champion opened the hand with a one spade bid. Now look at Mr. Muzzy's hand. He has a lot of high card strength including excellent spade support and a biddable suit of his own.

He bid his hearts, intending to raise spades on the next round. But there wasn't any next round. Certainly there was no reason for Mr. Champion to think there was a slam. And the partnership's immediate objective, game, had been reached when Mr. Muzzy said two hearts.

With a part score, when you have a good fit in partner's suit, raise him! Or make some kind of a forcing bid which can't be passed, if yuor hand is strong enough over all to justify such action.

Mr. Dale opened the 10 of diamonds and Mr. Muzzy won with the queen. He promptly took three rounds of hearts, wincing when Mrs. Keen showed out on the third round. He cashed the ace and king of diamonds, then led a spade from the board, covering Mrs. Keen's trey with the ace.

Mr. Dale ruffed, cashed the jack of hearts and led a club. Dummy's ace won and Mr. Muzzy threw a spade on the 13th diamond. He still had to lose a spade to Mrs. Keen.

"Game and rubber, partner," he said proudly, "and it's a good thing we stayed out of a slam."

Mr. Champion shook his head in disgust. "You dope," he said quietly. "We had a slam—a laydown slam in spades. But of course you had to play the hand. You play them so much better than I do."

Mr. Muzzy thought he had the great man at last. "Do you realize," he said, "that Mrs. Keen had four spades to the queen-jack?"

"My answer is yes," replied Mr. Champion deliberately. "I win any opening in my hand and lead a small spade. If Mrs. Keen plays low, I simply play the seven from dummy and it holds. Then I lose just one spade trick."

"That's double-dummy," said Mr. Muzzy sulkily.

"Double-nuts!" said Mr. Champion. "It's the standard safety play with that set-up of cards. If Dale should win the seven with the queen or jack, that would mean the suit had broken not worse than 3-1 and my ace and king would then pick up the rest of the trumps."

Immigration to Canada Shows Marked Increase

OTTAWA (CP)—A total of 98,057 immigrants reached Canada in the first six months of this year compared with 79,785 in the corresponding period of 1951, an increase of 18,272.

If the trend could be continued, Canada would have a near-record year for immigration. However, Immigration Minister Harris has said he expects the movement of new citizens to this country to drop in the last six months. Certain categories of workers will not be admitted after October.

A total of 194,000 immigrants were admitted in 1951—largest number for any year since 1913, when approximately 500,000 entered Canada.

The total for the first six months of this year included 54,103 workers and 43,954 dependents.

BRITISH INCREASE

The number of British immigrants jumped 63 per cent—totalling 23,001 compared with 14,130 in the corresponding six months of 1951. The number of Britons exceeded by about 8000 the total from any other country.

A slight increase was shown in the number of French immigrants. They totalled 2767 compared with 2272.

Arrivals from the United States totalled 3931 compared with 3688, an increase of seven per cent. Canadians returning from the United States also increased by about 33 per cent with 2494 returning in the first six months compared with 1825.
