"The Shepherd King"

A romance of the pyramids and the langorous Nile. A spectacular scenic picturization of the life of David, King of Israel. The local color of the Valley of Kings, Luxor brought to the screen with great realism. Scenes of Rome, Palestine and Egypt. Thrilling fight with lions. Battle scenes in which the producer was assisted by one thousand soldiers from the British garrison at Jerusalem. David's fight with Goliath and many historical episodes. History, tragedy, gleaming pageantry, colorful action, blended with enchanting romance set in the shadow of the Sphinx.

Nerio Bernardi, Guido Trenti, Violet Mersereau, Edy Darcla and gigantic cast.

REHABILITATE ALASKA SALMON

Effort to be Made to Conserve the Fish in Neighboring Territory

SEATTLE, July 15.—Henry O'Malley, United States fisheries commissioner, declared here before sailing for Alaska to enforce the new fisheries regulations that Alaska's vast fisheries will be swiftly rehabilitated to a valuation of $30,000,000 annually in fisheries products under the new restrictions.

These restrictions, he announced were:

Southeastern Alaska— Yakutat district, north, closed for 48 hours each week. Closed area around streams extended to open sea, with remainder Southeastern Alaska covered by twenty day closed periods in middle of season, and 36 hour weekly closed season.

Bristol Bay — In red salmon grounds fishing gear limited and season limited to thirty days with 36-hour weekly closed periods.

Port Moller District—On north side of Aleutians and peninsula, 84-hour weekly closed period; 60-hour weekly closed period until July 20 and 36-hour weekly closed period after July 30.

For the rest of the peninsula and the Chignik district packers are allowed only one-half the fish migrating up the mouths of rivers.

Cook Inlet— Forty-eight hour weekly closed period and upper end of inlet reserved.

Prince William Sound Area—Forty-eight hour weekly closed period and closed area around red salmon streams extending to 5,000 yards; 60 hour weekly closed period and length of stake nets limited on Copper River flats.

SHADOW GOWNS ARE LATEST FASHION AT PARIS THIS SEASON

Neat Form to Show Through in Sunlight but Nothing Indecent About It

PARIS, July 15. — Sun-and-Shadow gowns promise to be the most popular ones on the French race-courses this season. This means real transparency, of course; the sun shines right through and leaves only the shadow of Milady in full view.

Since the passing of the petticoat the Parisienne has adopted the silk knickerbockers, snug and close, which gives her the chic, slim line she is after. So there is nothing to prevent her neat form from showing when Old Sol is on hand. He can easily creep right through the thin trifles of chiffon and crepe frocks that are in fashion row, and it has been generally agreed that this is no more indecent than wearing knickers on the golf links and for country tramps.

Douchet is carrying out the transparent idea in a charming black chiffon, knife pleated and hanging straight from the shoulders. It is tied loosely by a narrow band at the hips and has a pointed tunic which hangs long in front and back and very short at the side. This is where the transparency comes in. There is a deep band of applique work in silver thread about this tunic which looks like a delicate bit of tapestry. Another shadow model comes in pale gray satin with a soft folding bodice and front side panel with the new scarf effect about the throat.

Wrap-around Skirts

Even tailleurs and summer suits are going over to the new transparent idea. Tight wrap-around skirts are worn over knickers of the same color and the jackets have the thinest of linings sometimes entirely separate from the jacket, only tacked at the neck and armholes. A coat spied at the French Derby last week came in black crepe satin without a lining and the seams bound inside with beige and red braid. It was cut straight without any break or fastening, and a yoke simulated by placing circles of beige crepe de chine in rows braided with half moons of red and black soutache alternating.

The transparency idea has hit hats and hosiery as well Diaphanous brims and crowns show all there is on top of the head and filmy stockings do not hide very much. In fact, "the thinner the better' seems to be the slogan for all things whether the summer be warm or cool.

Less and Less

"Sans undies," "naked clothing"—in other words nothing on at all to speak of, this is what Raymond Duncan, is prophesying for next year's fashions in Paris, according to one of the leading papers.

"Women are tending more and more to nakedness and that is what I have been working for for many years," declared the American philosopher sitting in his academy draped in a shadowy Greek mantle, sandals on his barefeet and his long grey hair bound about his head.

As a matter of fact, the women won't have so very much to leave off, thinks Mr. Duncan, since the days when no petticoats became the fashion underclothing has been very skimpy and made of the finest clinging materials in order to produce the slender silhouette.

"Naked clothing" which means the dress slipped right over the skin, will be as popular as his batik creations, according to this eccentric creator.

"If only the men would follow suit and adopt more simple garb for their unbeautiful trousers," sighed Mr. Duncan and added that he and his school of 15 or 20 neophytes will soon be starting off for a summer in Nice.

WOMEN AS DECOYS ON RUM RUNNING BOATS

Made Their Appearance in English Bay Recently While Liquor Was Loaded

VANCOUVER, July 14.— Mention of women employed in the rum-running industry has been frequent, but the use of "decoy women" has been an innovation among that class of trade in Puget Sound and British Columbia waters.

Recently a large yacht came into English Bay, near here, at full speed. After dropping anchor, the ship's awning canvas was run back on a roller, women, who were previously observed to be seated in luxurious wicker chairs, disappeared and only the pilot house above deck appeared. Liquor was loaded aboard and the vessel cleared, the canvas, wicker chairs and women resuming their places. On passing another ship three hundred yards to the right of the vessel, the women were seen to wave to the sailors.

Later, according to fishermen at Everett, Wash., the vessel attempted to land liquor near Everett. Appearance of a suspicious craft necessitates a quick "get-away" and the vessel started at full speed in the direction of Vancouver. One of the "women" fell overboard in the excitement. Fishermen "rescued" her and found that she was a dummy.
