Waters Near Kanatak Bad as the Graveyard of the Pacific to South

KETCHIKAN, Oct. 21. — The term "Graveyard of the Pacific" which has been applied to the west coast of Vancouver Island bids fair to have a rival in the piece of water off the Alaska peninsula, near Kanatak, says the Anchorage Times. Local skippers say uncanny conditions prevail in this immediate stretch of water and that Neptune to all appearance has established it as his "growlery" after the manner of Mr. Jarndice of "Bleak House."

At any rate woe unto the skipper of a small craft caught in the vicinity of Kanatak when Boreas receives a signal to cough.

"It was several years ago," said "Red" Olsen, skipper of the good gasboat Nanny B. growing reminiscent, when speaking of the wreck of the Nile, Olive and Chilkat on the Kanatak beach. "I had shipped in a whaler engaged in southwestern Alaskan waters and we were cruising offshore when a blow came up. I have been in many a blow in my time, but never had experienced the kind of weather we ran into.

"In addition to sweeping down and tearing the crest from the waves in great sheets, the wind appeared to blow from straight overhead. It made you think someone had thrown a fifty-pound weight onto your shoulders. We came close to landing on the beach and equally as close to foundering when the gale struck us. Of all the waters I have sailed that especial region holds the banner for hard, difficult and freakish blows. The man who plies those waters must be a skipper with courage for it is often a fight to the death."

MEN VISITORS MORE HONEST THAN WOMEN

One Out of Every Fifty Eating at Wembley Evaded Paying Bill

LONDON, Oct. 21.—The consensus of opinion among the thousands of waitresses who care for the crowds which attend the British Empire exhibition, is that men are more honest than women. The waitresses do not, however, put the general honesty of the human race on a very high level.

A report on this subject, which resulted in a pay-as-you-receive system being instituted in many eating places at Wembley, stated that about one out of every 50 people eating there has succeeded in evading the payment of bills. The evaders seemingly pass the cashier in the crowds.

Now customers have to pay for the food as it is brought from the kitchen and, as the waitress is held responsible for the amount of the bill, the evasions have been reduced to nil.

Sport Chat

To those who are not familiar with the ins and outs of horse-racing in Canada, it may be interesting to know that Commander J. K. L. Ross of Montreal, considered to possess the most important racing stable in Canada, won up to date during the present racing year, $118,915 in purses. Of course, this amount is not net profit as it is a very expensive matter to keep up a racing stable of the size and quality of that owned by Mr. Ross who has a large establishment for the breeding and training of horses some miles below Montreal on the St. Lawrence River. Mr. Ross is a director of the Canadian Pacific Railway and he visited Prince Rupert last year with President Beatty's party.

O'Connell, the Giants' outfielder, who was permanently banished from organized baseball just before the World Series commenced this year because he offered $500 to one of the Philadelphia players to throw a game, was bought by the Giants for $75,000 as a substitute outfielder. He was born in Sacramento 23 years ago and was educated at the Santa Clara University. He was idolized by the baseball enthusiasts of the state of California and, before he left for New York, an O'Connell Day was given when he was presented with a house and lot. There is an inclination in the East to disbelieve that O'Connell made the bribery offer on his own bat and that is why it seems certain that a fuller investigation of the circumstances will have to be made. O'Connell said he was put up to it by "Cozy" Dolan, one of his team-mates, who was also expelled.
