Grenade kills boy

DELAWARE, Ohio (AP)—An explosion of army rifle grenades in a shed where two children were playing killed a five-year-old boy Tuesday and critically injured his six-year-old sister. Police said John Howey and his sister, Kathy Sue, were found some distance from the shed, which was blown apart. It was not known where the children got the grenades.

BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

In many situations where the winning play for declarer is to postpone leading trumps the necessity for that postponement is far from obvious. In today's deal, for example, it was completely hidden—as far as Mr. Muzzy was concerned, anyway.

The best way to avoid a trap of this kind is to pause before playing that first card from dummy at trick one—and plan your play. Forget about over-tricks. Concentrate on the safest method of play which will bring in enough tricks for your contract, figuring on unfavorable distribution of the opposing cards.

The roof fell in on Mr. Muzzy in this hand. The opening lead of the nine of diamonds rode around to the closed hand and the jack won.

Mr. Muzzy smiled happily at this fortunate development. He could see no danger.

Mr. Muzzy

As he analyzed it, he had one loser in clubs and either one or two in spades. If the ace of spades happened to be on his right, he could lead up to his king and win a trick with that card on the first or second round of the suit. He could then ruff a spade and actually make five-odd.

But in order to lead up to the king of spades he had to enter dummy. That was easy and he led the nine of hearts to the ace. A spade was returned and the king put up. Mr. Champion won with the ace and led a trump.

Worried now, Mr. Muzzy won on the board and led another spade. Mr. Champion won with the ten and proceeded to lead the last trump off the board. Now the defenders were able to win three spades and a club for a one-trick set.

"Did you think you bid five, Muzzy?" kidded Mr. Champion.

"Certainly not," replied Mr. Muzzy hotly. "Can I help it if the ace of spades was behind my king?"

Mr. Champion grinned wickedly. "In a word, yes," he said. "In fact, I can prove you were trying for five-odd, whether you meant to or not. Tell me, what would you have led at trick two if you had held three spades to the six spot instead of three to the king?"

"I'd have led a spade from my hand," Mr. Muzzy admitted. "There'd be no point in using a trump to enter dummy to lead up to a six spot."

"Exactly," said Mr. Champion. "With a weaker holding in spades you'd have made your contract. You used a vital trump at trick two because it's usually the correct play to lead up to a king. Good trump management requires enough imagination to see the need for an unusual play now and then."
