Donation to Museum From Terrace Resident Proves Interesting to Board

At the meeting of the Museum Board yesterday afternoon, R. L. McIntosh presiding, a letter was read from John Warne of Terrace to the custodian, stating that he was donating to the museum a piece of wood that was dug up 57 feet below the surface on Last Chance Creek in the Yukon in 1902 in frozen ground. He said the wood must have been deposited there before the ground froze, possibly thousands of years ago and perhaps millions. He said the ground froze solid to a depth of 210 feet in the Yukon.

Mr. Warne also stated that he was donating to the museum at the same time a musical instrument from the north which was a combination of guitar and mandolin all made by hand. It could be played by any musician who could play the guitar.

The board will order that on arrival the articles be acknowledged and the donor thanked.

Another donation was made by Dr. Neal Carter of a fungus with a Haida emblem painted on its flat surface in colors. The work was done by Moses Alexcee.

The curator reported that during the month 70 visitors had registered at the museum. As the place has been open only on Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday afternoons this was considered not a bad record.

In order to accomodate a number of people who wished to visit the museum in the evenings, it was decided to not open Thursday afternoons in future during the winter but instead to keep open Saturday evenings until 8, or later by arrangement.

WHIFFLETS

From the Waterfront

Making a special voyage to Alaska to handle passenger traffic which has accumulated because of the tie-up of American shipping due to the maritime workers' strike on the west coast of the United States, C. P. R. steamer Princess Louise, Capt. S. K. Gray, arrived in port at 8:30 this morning from Vancouver and sailed about an hour later for Skagway and other northern points. The vessel is due to call here southbound on Sunday afternoon next. There were 28 passengers on the Louise Three disembarked here and thirteen boarded the vessel here for the north.

The latest issue of the Journal of the Biological Board of Canada contains a report by Dr. A. L. Pritchard, of the Pacific Biological Station, on factors influencing the spawning migration of the pink salmon. The report is based on data collected at McClinton Creek, Massett Inlet, in the Queen Charlotte Islands, and deals especially with the effects of rainfall and freshwater flow on the run. Dr. Pritchard finds "a positive significant mathematical correlation" between the numbers of fish migrating from the sea each day, the maximum daily water height in the creek, and daily rainfall in the area, even though migration may be reduced or arrested by extreme freshet conditions. His data show no effect of temperature on the run.

Delayed by having had heavy freights for Ocean Falls and Prince Rupert, C. N. R. steamer Prince Rupert, Capt. H. E. Nedden, did not arrive until 2 o'clock this afternoon from Vancouver, Powell River and Ocean Falls and is sailing at 4 o'clock for Anyox and Stewart whence she is due to return here tomorrow evening southbound.

After having been away for the past two months engaged in packing herring from Fitzhugh Sound to the B. C. Packers reduction plant at Hecate on the West Coast of Vancouver Island, Armour Salvage Co.'s big service boat Algie, with Capt. John Desmulles in command, arrived in port at 7 o'clock last night from down the coast. During the charter, the Algie experienced many extremely stormy trips. Once it took her eight days to take a load from Namu to the West Coast. On another occasion she had to go around via Victoria.

NETTING HALIBUT

Experiment Gives Very Good Returns at Lofoten, Norway

The following is translated from "Washington Posten" a Norwegian newspaper published in Seattle:

Ove Pedersen of Vestaraalen, Norway, was recently granted a subsidy to obtain necessary equipment for an experiment to catch halibut with nets. Mr. Pedersen obtained 8 nets at a cost of about $10 each. For the rest of the subsidy money he purchased gasoline and other necessities to set out for Skrova, Lofoten.

The result was a great surprise as the first day he caught fish to the value of over 300 kroner. And the following days the catches ran from 150 kroner to 450 kroner per day.

As could be expected the news spread like wildfire and most of the people did not know what to think about it. But already the first week saw a number of people busy obtaining necessary equipment.

A news correspondent writes that at Svolver already ten vessels are in operation with the new gear, most of them with two or three nets. But the urge is to get more gear.

The other day one man caught six halibut with three nets The minimum catch so far is three fish, while the highest catch is eleven good-sized fish weighing about 600 kilograms (about 1300 lbs.). At a price of from 80 ore to 1.10 kronen per kilogram this gave a very handsome return.

Otherwise the people of Lofoten are busy preparing equipment. Before long it is predicted that more than 100 will be engaged in this new method.

(One Kroner is at present worth about 24½c. One kilogram equals about 2.2046 lbs. One Krone equals about 100 ore).
