Archbishop Discusses Problem Of Pleasure.

Yesterday the lenten season commenced. Today Archbishop Du Vernet gives readers an interesting short article on what he entitles "The Problem of Pleasure," a subject most appropriate to the season. He says:

"If we understand the primary process in the working of the human mind we shall see clearly why habitual pleasure seekers are always weak in character. In this primary process there is first a thought, or idea, in the mind. Then there is this thought energized by some emotion, or feeling. Next there is this energized thought seeking to express itself in action. Lastly, there is the appropriate action externalizing this energized thought.

"It will be observed that the emotion, or feeling, is a link in the chain of causation; the thought, the feeling, the tendency, the act. Any one who takes the emotional link out of the middle of this vital chain and puts it at the end and tries to make it supreme is violating the human constitution. This is exactly what those who are seeking pleasure for the sake of pleasure are doing. The feeling of pleasure plays a most important part in human behavior. It helps to energize the idea which leads to action. For example, if it were not for the pleasure of eating many would go without the food necessary for their bodily strength, but those who make the pleasure of eating their end in view soon throw their whole mental and physical machinery out of gear.

Gratification Becomes A Poisoning Evil.

"This same primary law applies to every department of life. An emotion, a feeling, a gratification pursued for its own sake quickly becomes a poisoning evil, whereas when controlled and directed aright as an impelling motive to a higher end it is a power for good. It is only legitimate to pursue pleasure when this is for the purpose of diversion or relaxation, for in such a case, while pleasure is apparently pursued for its own sake, preparation for activity is the distant end in view which heightens the enjoyment of the recreating pleasure. Those who take the emotional link out of its true place in the vital chain and put it last as thought it were all are really robbing life of its highest joy.

Joy Of Living Is Joy Of Doing.

"The joy of living is not the pleasure of being played upon in a passive state with fleeting sensational thrills, it is the joy of doing. Among the crowd of pleasure seekers we can easily detect those who are rapidly deteriorating in character. They are those who are seeking pleasure not as a healthy diversion from excessive toil, or as an invigorating recreation, but simply for its own sake with no practical aim, no lofty purpose in life.

"Here is where the Christian religion is so valuable. It comes not to destroy the pleasures of life but to uplift them and direct their energy into higher channels. The season of Lent was never intended to spread gloom and depression. God is both cheerful and cheering, because He is both Light and Love. Christ said:—'I came not to destroy but to fulfil.'"

F. H. DU VERNET, Archbishop of Caledonia.

Vancouver Proposes Having World Fair.

A proposal is afoot in Vancouver to have a world fair in that city in 1927. It is to be hoped that the scheme will go through and Prince Rupert will undoubtedly do its share to aid the big city to the south in carrying out its plans. There are sometimes little irritations felt here over the attitude of Vancouver toward local issues. There is a feeling here that there is a tendency for the big city to hog everything and not give the smaller one a chance. So the villages and small towns in this neighborhood often feel toward Prince Rupert. At a time like this, however, if Vancouver decides to go ahead with its big project every city and town and village in British Columbia should co-operate to the fullest possible extent. An exhibition would advertise the whole province and Prince Rupert would get its share. We hope Vancouver will go ahead with its project and make it a success.

RADICAL VIEW OF MACDONALD

Zinovieff, Chairman of Third International, Analyzes British Situation

DREAMS OF FUTURE

Declares Premier Is Type of Labor Aristocracy But Step Toward Revolution

At the 13th conference of the Communist Party, recently held in Moscow, Zinovieff, chairman of the Third International, made a long speech, which occupied two pages of the Pravda, says the London Times. This is the first time that a speech on the foreign policy of the Communist Party and of the executive of the Third International has appeared in detail in the Soviet press.

The speech was divided into two parts, the first dealing with questions of Soviet foreign policy and the second with the affairs of the Communist International. Zinovieff devoted a considerable portion of the first part of the speech to relations with Great Britain.

Macdonald Cabinet

What will Macdonald's cabinet represent from the point of view of the development of the International Labor movement and the international revolution? Zinovieff asked. With regard to the "top strata" and petty parliamentary politicians, he said, it is of no great importance. But with regard to the mass Labor movement it will be an event of the utmost importance. You all remember how, at the second congress of the Communist International, Lenin advised the young British Communist Party to support the "Menshevik" British Labor Party, to vote for its candidates and help it to come into power at the earliest opportunity. You remember, too, how frankly Lenin explained (there is no need to make a secret of the fact) that we should support the British Labor Party, Macdonald's party, in the same way as the rope "supports" the man who hangs himself. He said that the sooner they came to power the better, because their failure would become evident, and the illusions of British Labor be dispelled all the sooner, and the road cleared for the proletarian revolution.

Historical Revenge

That moment is now approaching. British Labor, as a whole, interprets Macdonald's access to power, not as a mere parliamentary change of government, but as the advent to power of the working class, of the toilers. The average British worker looks upon this as the historical revenge of Labor; he believes that, with the advent of Labor, unemployment will cease, and pressure will be brought to bear on the rich. Such a point of view is dictated by class instinct. This, comrades, is a fact of the greatest significance.

After discussing the history of the development of the British Labor movement and the "British Labor aristocracy," Zinovieff went on:—

Will Become Farce

Macdonald is a typical representative of the upper strata of the Labor class, that is to say, of the Labor aristocracy. Nevertheless, his advent to power in a country like England is an event of world-wide historical importance. This is not in Esthonia, or in Bulgaria, or even Germany; it is in Great Britain, whose bourgeoisie actually holds one-sixth of the universe under its sway. The importance of this event is not diminished by the fact that, for the time being, the Labor government will become a farce, that Macdonald will certainly grovel on all fours before the opulent English bourgeoisie. Of course, the latter is playing its own political game and prompting Macdonald to assume power, in the hope that the sooner he does so, the more surely he will be gobbled up. Nevertheless, when so powerful and influential a bourgeoisie hands over the power to Labor, it may be assumed that is not done merely for the pleasure of making an "experiment." That is why the advent of Ramsay Macdonald to power marks a most important phase in the international Labor movement, a great advance towards the liberation of the British Labor class, and a mighty stride forward on the road towards the liberation of the British Labor class, and a mighty stride forward on the road towards the international revolution.

German Situation

The second and greater part of the speech was devoted to the policy of the Communist International. Zinovieff dwelt in detail on the activities of that body in connection with the situation in Germany. Speaking of what happened in that country last autumn, he said:—

The party (meaning the Russian Communist Party) realized that a moment had arrived in Germany which could not be regarded otherwise than as a moment for a revolution which would have a considerable chance of success. We, the executive, are accused by some of having fixed the date of the German revolution, but I assert that this decision was left by us to the German Communist Party.

The next point is the events in Saxony, and this will bring us to the root of the dissensions within the German Party. We advocated the entry of members of the Saxon Communist Party into the Saxon government in order to use it as jumping-off ground and organize the struggle for power. We expected that the Communist group in the Saxon and Thuringian government would insist on the immediate arming of 50,000 to 60,000 proletarians, and an attack on the Bavarian Fascisti. Our German comrades had persuaded us that such a manoeuvre had a chance of success. The mistake was made by Radek. It was he who pulled back the German party by the coat tails, when it should have been urged to fight.

THE QUALITY OF BULK TEA

The Quality of Bulk Tea is always unreliable for several reasons. In the first place, being unlabelled its origin is unknown and there is no one who has any particular responsibility for its goodness. In the second place, it is exposed to the air and therefore very quickly loses its flavor and freshness. Even if it were as good as "SALADA" in the first place, it would rapidly deteriotate and in any case it would be impossible for any dealer to follow consistently the same quality throughout the year. "SALADA" always maintains an unvarying high standard possible through skilful blending.
