Law banning bonus game

VANCOUVER (CP) — Legislation banning distribution of trading stamps and similar retail promotional devices became effective in B.C. yesterday.

Immediate effect was halting of a bonus card game by Shop-Easy Stores Ltd. The company earlier announced that cardholders may complete cards now in their possession, but no more will be issued.

In the game shoppers compete for cash prizes ranging from $1 to $1,000 after value of purchases punched on the card totals $100.

The extension of the game for current card holders does not violate the act, Wilbur G. Sheardown, Shop - Easy managing-director here said. The legislation only halts distribution of the devices to retailers.

Bridegroom has expenses before wedding

By The Associated Press

A bridegroom may be told it's not the cost of marriage, it's the upkeep. But he has some definite wedding expenses to meet.

His own wearing apparel and luggage will be major items unless he's well outfitted already.

As for the ceremony itself, here is a list of items to be covered by the groom:

1) Wedding ring 2) Gift to the bride 3) Bridal bouquet 4) Boutonnieres 5) Gifts for ushers 6) Licence fee 7) Clergyman's fee 8) Wedding trip.

Officers elected for Curling Club

Election of officers for the Prince Rupert Women's Curling Club, for 1960, took place June 6, at the Civic Centre.

Elected were: Ruby Merrison, president; Jean Gordon, vice-president; Jessie Collins, secretary; Doris Cooper, treasurer; Gladys Eyolfson, zone representative; Mabel Shier, canteen manager; and Tona Armstrong, Gerry Gordon, Alma Whatman, Olga Newton, and Doreen Pallant, as directors.

BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

This hand developed one of the strangest first tricks on record. Mr. Masters got to a four-spade contract by means of the Stayman convention. Mrs. Rhule's two-club bid was conventional and asked her partner to bid a four-card major suit if he had one.

Mr. Masters happened to be four long in both majors. He bid the spades first. After that, there was no good reason for Mrs. Rhule to look any further and she properly put the hand in a game contract.

Mr. Meek led the queen of clubs and the dummy hand was put down. At this point Mr. Masters saw nothing unusual. It appeared to be a routine deal, with 10 sure winners on top. He played dummy's king of clubs—and Mr. Champion ruffed.

Mr. Masters

Mr. Masters shook his head like a boxer trying to shake off a punch. Mr. Meek had started with nine clubs. And those 10 winners had now shrunk to nine. One trick had been lost and there were still two losers in diamonds and one in hearts.

However, since Mr. Meek had nine cards in one suit he had to be very short in the other three. If he could be put in the lead at the right time, there was still a chance. After a little thought Mr. Masters made a surprising and sensational play of his own. He played the ace of clubs from his hand.

At trick two, Mr. Champion returned the king of diamonds. Mr. Masters put up the ace and sighed thankfully when that did not get ruffed. He was even more pleased when both defenders followed suit to two leads of trumps.

Next he cashed the ace of hearts and when Mr. Meek followed suit to that, he was known to have nothing left but clubs.

The king of hearts was now cashed and then came a club lead which Mr. Meek had to win.

On the forced club return Mr. Masters sluffed a heart from dummy and a diamond from his own hand.

On the next club he ruffed in dummy and discarded his last diamond. Then he simply cross-ruffed for the rest of the tricks. What had started out as a routine deal had turned into a nightmare—but with a happy ending.
