FLOYD PATTERSON, ex-heavyweight champion, who will meet Ingemar Johansson, Monday night at the Polo grounds, for a rematch of the world's championship, is eight pounds overweight.

Johansson, Patterson, set for Monday's fight

NEWTON, Conn. (AP)—Will seven more pounds help or hurt Floyd Patterson in his return bout Monday with Sweden's Ingemar Johansson, world heavyweight boxing king?

"It's going to help," Patterson said Thursday. "I'm hitting harder and I think I'm just as fast at 188 or 189 pounds as at 182."

The 25-year-old former champion scaled 182 pounds a year ago when he was dethroned by the 196-pound Johansson on a seven-knockdown, third-round technical knockout. This time Floyd said he will hit 188 or 189. Johansson said he will weigh 196.

Johansson doesn't think the added weight will be of any benefit to the challenger. He classifies Floyd as a sort of ugly duckling—neither a light heavy nor full-fledged heavy.

There's no doubt Patterson is aiming to pack more power into his wallops. He didn't get a chance to unlimber any big guns in the 1959 massacre. If he does this time, he is counting on the extra meat and muscle to beat down the champ.

HASN'T SLOWED HIM UP

"The weight has come on naturally," said Floyd. "I feel fine and it hasn't slowed me up a bit."

Floyd weighed around 190 pounds Thursday and appeared impressive in a three-round drill against Bjarne Lingaas, a six-foot-three, 191-pound Norwegian from Brooklyn.

The solemn-faced former champ planned to wind up training with a two-round session today, although he said "I'm definitely ready now." For the record, Patterson appeared just as good in his final workouts last year.

Patterson's brilliant effort impressed a group of four former champions, especially Gus Lesnevich, former light-heavyweight ruler. Other ring bluebloods present were Joe Louis, Jimmy Braddock and Rocky Marciano.

"If Floyd fights Johansson the way he tore into his sparring partners, he has to win," said Lesnevich. "He has to go right out there and take charge. He has to go in and fire away. His offence will be his defence. I'm still not convinced that Johansson is a superman. He does too many things wrong."

Meanwhile, at Johansson's training camp in Grossinger, New York, the champion's advisor, Edwin Ahlquist, said that Patterson isn't misleading the Johansson camp by indifferent performances in preparation for the title bout.

"Patterson and his handlers are trying to fool the public but they are not fooling us with their iron curtain policy," Ahlquist said.

"We know Patterson has been instructed to look bad deliberately in his public training, but we have information that he has been going all out in secret sessions."

He accused Patterson's camp of taking a "public de damned" attitude unworthy of a heavyweight title contender and former champion.

Last year Johansson refused to show his right hand in training for his first bout against Patterson and looked so bad many observers thought he didn't belong in the same ring with the American fighter.

In contrast with Patterson's sparton-like training methods, Johansson started a five-day relaxation period, by saying "resting is a wonderful thing."

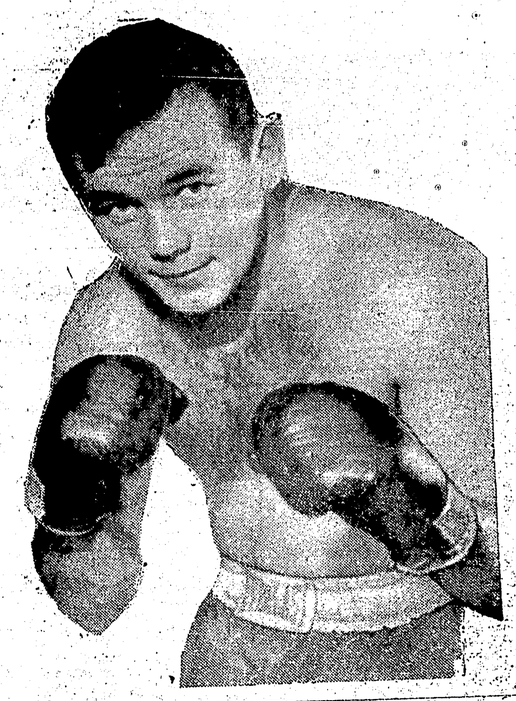
"I feel fine, and as the days progress, I seem to get stronger and stronger," he added. "I've worked hard and this rest is just what I'm looking forward to."

A year ago, Ingemar did the same thing. It was criticized severely by the press.

However, his "Hammer of Thor," as the right hand is known, proved the point with a smashing third-round knockout of Patterson to bring the world title to Scandinavia for the first time.

Asked about the way Patterson has been training, Johansson said:

"He is a good boxer and puncher. He knows what he is doing. I hear he has a new style. I can't see why one should change after so many years. But I'm prepared to adapt myself to any way that he'll fight.



INGEMAR JOHANSSON, left, says he'll take it easy until fight-night, because, "I feel fine, I seem to get stronger every day without training and I need a rest."

North Star downs Sunnyside before 200 rainsoaked fans

Despite heavy rains, about 200 spectators saw North Star overpower Sunnyside Inlanders 8-1 in a one-sided soccer affair at Algoma Park last night.

The bottlers netted three quick goals within 20 minutes of the game when Hans Zimmerman scored twice and Romilio Salvati added another.

Sunnyside applied a fierce rally during the last part of the first half but goalie Reszo Melich displayed his goaltending prowess with leaping saves.

North Star opened the second half on a similar note when they added another four goals in the opening 15 minutes.

Gene Wittchen with two, Steve Gruber and Steve Karolyi with one each accounted for the scores.

Inlanders spoiled Melich's shutout minutes later when centre-forward Bill Blackwater scored.

North Star's Karolyi scored his second goal of the game, 10 minutes later for the final score.

The victory boosts North Star into a second place tie with 708 Islanders and Aiyansh Luckies.

Weekend action will feature the top teams pitted against each other for league supremacy. Saturday 708 Islanders clash with New Royals while on Sunday ICC Eagles meet Aiyansh Luckies.

Wins trophy

TORONTO (CP) — Johnny Bower, pro hockey goalie for 15 years and with Toronto Maple Leafs the last two seasons, was named winner of the J. R. Bickell memorial trophy Thursday.

The trophy, exclusively for Toronto players, is awarded at the discretion of the directors of Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens. It is not necessarily an annual award — there were no winners in 1957 or 1958, two years when the Leafs missed the National Hockey League playoffs.

Garden president Conn Smythe said "the directors felt that Bower was the player who best represented the Maple Leafs both on and off the ice during the 1959-60 season."

Leafs purchased Bower's contract from Cleveland Barons of the American Hockey League after the 1957-58 season.

In his first season with Leafs he shared goaltending chores with Ed Chadwick. Last season he had the job all to himself for 66 schedule and 10 playoff games. His goals — against average for the season was 2.73.

The emotions of being a father...

The emotions of being a father stay constant through the ages. The hopes and fears . . . the wishes and apprehensions. The humbling realization that no other task in all the world carries with it so grave a responsibility, so rewarding a victory as that of being a father.

For where else does a boy look . . . for light which will lead to sure places for young feet to stand . . . for guidance through the great continent of the mind . . . for those words and touchings that will open wisdom's way . . . for a hold-out hand, a haven in every sudden storm?

Where else but to a father, who knows that every son is a miracle, like daily light.

More than anything else Fatherhood is guidance and wisdom — the wisdom of setting a good example in thought, in word, in deed. And one principle that surely deserves to be exemplified is the practice of Moderation in all things, including the use of whisky. It is this thought which The House of Seagram wishes to leave with you on this Father's Day, 1960. May it enrich your life with happiness, and your son's thereafter.
