TRIED TO GET WHALE WHEN HAND LOGGING

SKIDEGATE, Mar. 4.— Every man to his trade is a maxin that Charles Valley is advocating here. He tells a story to illustrate the old truism. It was about the time he went handlogging for whales on Queen Charlotte Islands.

Mr. Valley is a hand logger and is not an adept at whaling, neither has he the outfit with which to capture the leviathan of the deep. Last summer he was logging at Lagoon Bay, Moresby Island. As regularly as clockwork a whale would pass beneath the bluff where he and his partner were cutting down trees and every day they stopped to watch him and speculate on the amount of oil there was in his body and what he would be worth if dead.

Scented Ambergris

One day the whale blew just opposite them and they got a whiff of the vapor that came from the blow. From the stench the boys were convinced that this particular mammal had a secretion of ambergris inside his big carcass and they laid plans to get him. They felled a hemlock about 100 feet long on the edge of the bluff where the whale was in the habit of passing. This they planned to use as a harpoon with which to spear the proposed victim. They sharpened the top of the pile to use as a spear point, raised the log on greasy skids, planted two jacks behind it with which to start it going down the cliff and everything was ready when Mr. Whale showed up as usual . Everything worked well. As the great creature approached the jacks were manipulated and at the opportune moment the immense harpoon was hurled from the cliff in the right direction.

Fell Short

Mr. Valley would like to have related how the point of the log pierced the side of the whale and how they found a piece of ambergris worth ten thousand dollars or thereabouts, but no such glory was theirs. The log fell a little short and today, as far as the loggers know, the whale is still cavorting in the sea and blowing unpleasant odors on the air.

Mr. Valley and his partner decided that their hand loggers' license did not include whaling and that from henceforth they would stick to their trade .

HAZELTON PEOPLE FEEL OPTIMISTIC

With Regard to Prospective Timber and Mining Developments This Year Says Dr. Wrinch, M.L.A.

A general feeling of optimism prevails this year in the Hazelton district states Dr. H. C. Wrinch, M.L.A. for Skeena, who is a visitor in the city today. This is particularly with respect to timber and mining development. The pole camps are being re-opened and the establishment of booming facilities at Cedarvale by the Hanson Timber & Lumber Co. means that poles can be floated down the river from Hazelton district.

Sport Chat

The basketball excursion this winter of the Anyox High School pupils to Prince Rupert and the return trip of the locals to Anyox have certainly been enjoyed by the players who were fortunate enough to participate and have probably been of some educational value besides bringing the youngsters of the two towns in touch with each other. In future they will, doubtless, be annual affairs which will be looked forward to by all concerned. The trips are conducive to the development of good, healthy sport and those who go on them return to their homes much the better for having made them both from the standpoint of knowledge they may have gained of district surroundings and the benefits to be derived from being associated with others who are engaged in studies similar to their own. The only handicap is the fact that the making of such trips take so much time.

Baseball experts in the United States actually admit that their national summer game is on the decline and golf is given the blame. The experts claim that, every year during the last five, thousands of promising young athletes in their teens, who might make star ball tossers, are weaned away from the bat and ball by the money that is to be earned by caddying and the prospects of becoming world famous like Sarazen and Bobby Jones and others. A campaign to counteract the attractions of golf has been advocated for the last three years and it is now suggested that trophies be offered by the Major Leagues and, if necessary, the Minors in various parts of America. Trips to the training camps, free of expense, have been suggested as an incentive to stick to the old ship and give golf the go-by.

The standing of the Cribbage League to date, taking into account the last games played on Monday night, is as follows:

	W.	L.	Pts.
Dry Dock	5	2	5
Elks	5	3	5
Orange Lodge	4	2	4
Regiment	4	2	4
St. Andrew's	3	4	3
G. W. V. A.	3	4	3
Sons of Canada	3	4	3
Moose	2	5	2
Grotto	2	5	2

The last games of the season will be played next Monday with one postponed fixture between the Regiment and Loyal Orange Lodge to take place in the meantime.

Four games of the billiard tournament between the Great War Veterans' Association and the Prince Rupert Billiard Parlor marking the close of the second division schedule were played last night giving the Billiard Parlor a lead by 513 to 507. The fifth game between Dr. West (War Veterans) and Frank Zieman (Billiard Parlor) is to be played tonight. The individual scores last night were as follows:

S. L. Warrior (Great War Veterans) 117; A. Donald (Billiard Parlor) 150.

H. F. Wearmouth, 90; F. Aldridge, 150.

E. Fenelon, 150; D. Howe, 99.

C. L. Youngman, 150; G. Mallett, 114.
