Probably there are few situations known to drama more thrilling than that in which an innocent person allows himself to be convicted of mured to save another. David Butler in "The Arizona Express" at the Westholme tonight, does it even more dramatically than usual—probably because Lincoln J. Carter, that famous king of melodrama, wrote the play.

David is deeply in love with a dancer who is using him to get information about his uncle's bank in which he works. The uncle suspects the girl, follows her to her apartment and finds her drawing the plan of the bank for Johnson, her lover, who is at the head of a gang of thugs. He tries to get the drawings away from the girl and Johnson shoots him. Just then a knock is heard at the door and the girl pulls her hair over her face, rips open her waist and tells David, who enters, that his uncle had assaulted her and she shot him. When the house detectives enter a minute later, David tells them that he did the shooting to protect the girl. It is a thrilling moment, and it is only a beginning. The whole picture is redolent with such tense situations.

There are the many adventures Katherine Keith, David's sister has when she sets out to retrieve an incriminating letter written by the dancer which would prove her brother's innocence. There is a breath-taking moment when she crawls along a narrow ledge high up on a building and enters the window of Johnson's hotel room. Then, after getting the letter, there is the wild chase in a taxi through crowded streets, when Johnson discovers its loss and pursues her.

Later there is a train wreck in which a long line of cars and a locomotive plunge over a trestle and into a river, and a fight in the water where a mail clerk keeps the precious letter safe. The chase ends only after the clerk and Katherine have commandeered a locomotive, narrowly escaped crashing into a train coming from the opposite direction and finally reach the Governor's house with the letter just in time to secure David's pardon.

SPECTACULAR RAID ON BOOTLEG JOINT

Leading Lights of Hollywood Include Personnel of "Those Who Dance"

Police staged a spectacular raid on a "bootlegging joint" which has been operating in the cellar of a deserted tenement under the name of "The Cellarette."

Aside from the huge quantities of liquor stored there, the raid netted the most spectacular haul in months for the prisoners taken included leading lights of Hollywood's screen colony—Blanche Sweet, Bessie Love, Warner Baxter, Robert Agnew, Mathew Bets, Lydia Knott and Lucille Ricksen!

The fact that these notables appear in a reel raid instead of a real raid is all that saves them from notoriety. They are featured players in Thomas H. Ince's drama "Those Who Dance," a First National release which tells the dramatic story of liquor and is shown here at the week end.

Without dealing with the moral of the prohibition question, Ince has staged a drama as effective as it is unusual in this story. The bootlegger, the hijacker, who plays unmolested on the bootlegger, and the prohibition forces all have their share of the limelight with a human interest story of a young girl who goes into New York and seemingly becomes part of the underworld to save her brother from a gang of criminals holding plenty of heart throbs.

THE SILENT WATCHER IS RHINEHART STORY

Picturized Version Here at Midweek Has Human Appeal

Bessie Love and Glenn Hunter are the featured players in "The Silent Watcher," an adaptation of Mary Roberts Rinehart's story, "The Altar on the Hill," which appeared in the Saturday Evening Post.

"The Silent Watcher" pictorially relates the story of Joe Roberts, secretary to John Steele, famous lawyer and senatorial candidate and their respective family and business affairs. The story is said to possess much of intense human appeal and considerable wholesome humor and reaches its climax when the secretary is called to police headquarters and given the third degree in an effort to attach the blame for the murder of a girl, with whom his employer had been in close association, and of which the boy knew nothing. Many surprising developments are said to occur when the youth finds the girl to have been shot by a gun registered in his name and in an apartment he had rented for his employer in his own name.

Hunter, in interpreting the role of Joe Roberts, is reported to have given one of the finest dramatic performances the screen has ever seen, and Miss Love, as Mary Roberts, likewise reaches dramatic heights, reviewers state.

PRESENTATION MADE MISS JUDITH LAMBLY

Friends Spring Surprise in Anticipation of Forthcoming Marriage to Will Stephens of Prince Rupert

The Lambly ranch, Lewis Island, was the scene on Saturday evening last of a very enjoyable social function when a number of friends and neighbors on the island sprang a surprise party, the occasion being the forthcoming marriage of Miss Judith Lambly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R .E. Lambly to Will Stephen, son of Mrs. P. Stephen of this city.

During the evening the prospective bride was presented with several beautiful gifts. The gifts included an oak dining room table and Morris chair by Fred Keith, J. Oland and H. Steedhorse. Hand made doilies and tray cloths by Mrs. Goodcope and a hand worked doilie by little Miss Goodcope. Mrs. Rosang presented a case of cutlery, Mrs. Ivor Wicks handworked pillow slips, and Frank Armstrong a dresser.

A most enjoyable time was spent in dancing, music and games, and delectable refreshments were served at midnight. The wedding will take place in Prince Rupert on February 24.

SKIDEGATE

J. McCullough, manager of the Sitka Spruce Mills Ltd. of Queen Charlotte City is making good progress getting the mill in shape for operation. Twenty men are employed there. Mr. and Mrs. J. McKenzie, who have taken over the Premier Hotel, are boarding the men.

Capt. George McRae and Capt. Nels Larsen are busy repairing their boat to go to Kootenay Harbor where Capt. McRae owns the Blue Mule group of mineral claims. The ore there contains free milling gold and the assays have averaged $26 to the ton and naturally everyone on the Islands is interested in the development of the property, which is situated on the west coast of Mogesby Island.

Lemon soles are very plentiful just now off Skidegate village. The natives go out and catch all they want in a few minutes with hook and line.

The fishing boat Wanderer with skipper Nels Neilson arrived from Prince Rupert on the way to the banks.

Freeman Tingley of Port Clements came here on the last trip of the Prince John to take over the logging for the Queen Charlotte mill. He will use oxen in the woods.

The new school was opened on Friday last. The Thirteenth was chosen as being a lucky day.

J. Jones & Co. have brought in a new motor truck which they will operate between Skidegate village and Skidegate Mission.

Capt. Archie Fleming of the Dorothkolon arrived in port recently from Cumshewa where he has been towing logs for the T. A. Kelly Co.

R. McDougal has finished his logging contract at Lagoon Bay and has closed down the camp.

Al Daden has finished up at Lagan Inlet where he has been logging for the T. A. Kelly Co.

SMITHERS

Major R. Lowe of Prince George was a business visitor in Smithers the latter part of last week. A revision is being made in the boundaries of the Public Works districts and Mr. Low has received the appointment of Assistant district engineer for the Omineca district and will establish his headquarters at Burns Lake or one of the other towns up the line. Mr. Low was formerly stationed at Clinton with a similiar position.

A very enjoyable evening was spent at the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. G. Oulton on Thursday night when a number of friends of the town and district gave them a surprise party. Refreshments were brought along and dancing and games made up a program that lasted until the early hours of the morning.

Word has been received from Edmonton, that the doctors there have every hope of being able to save Ernie Hann's eye that was badly injured by a flying splinter of wood a couple of weeks ago.

Mrs. D. D. Rolston entertained a number of ladies at a bridge party given in her home, Main Street on Thursday night. There were five tables and the guests enjoyed a most delightful evening followed by a dainty supper. Mrs. H. G. Windt was winner of the first prize, Mrs. S. P. Bennett winning the second.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Brewer gave a jolly dance at their home on Friday night, when several hours of dancing was interrupted only by an occasional song. Refreshments were served at midnight.
