CIVIL WAR IN RUSSIA

Demaree Bess, Moscow correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor, describes the purgings which have been going on in Russia as a "civil war." Hundreds of thousands of persons have been either shot or imprisoned or sent to concentration camps during the past two years while the mass of the people looked on and wondered what it was all about. The reason for the trouble, the correspondent says, is not quite apparent. It seems to be either that Joseph Stalin deliberately set out to destroy all possible rivals or that there was an organized movement in high communist quarters to get rid of Stalin and this purpose has been defeated. At any rate the under-cover war has had the effect of weakening Russia to such an extent that neighboring countries have been taking advantage of the opportunit yto make moves which prior to two years ago would not have been tolerated, such as the threatened invasion of Lithuania by Poland.

During the early days of the Communist movement in Russia an effort was made to spread Communism to all countries of the world and especially to European countries. Of late this effort has practically ceased and Russia is now turning her attention to China. She has withdrawn from Spain and turned her back upon the warring nations of Europe with the result that nations which formerly looked to her for support are just beginning to realize that no such support will be forthcoming.

One effect of the internal struggle in Russia has been the alineation of sympathy for Communism in the United States and other countries. The international Red movement has been almost destroyed by Moscow.

Another interesting move on the part of Russia is the cutting off of the nation from all neighbors by removing all Russian inhabitants far from the borders and strengthening of the border defense. This will isolate the country more than ever. Already it had been learned that many of the foreign legations had been closed and immigration from Europe discouraged. Even tourists are no longer welcomed as they were. The country is being deliberately cut off from Europe and converted into a hermit country and in the meantime aid is being extended to China where the Chinese troops are being drilled by German officers.

THE ORIENTAL MIND

In studying Russia it must be remembered that the country is more Oriental than Occidental. In some communities in European Russia they had a form of self-government many years ago but it was not quite the same as we understand self-government. There was always a restraining hand either visible or invisible. Much of the country knew nothing of self-government until after the revolution and today they have no real knowledge of it. The powerful political police and other restraining influences are even stronger than ever. The Oriental mind works differently from ours. Possibly the Oriental may understand us but we have not tried to understand him so find it difficult to realize what is going on in Russia, Japan and China. If today China and Russia are drawn together they may prove to be a very powerful world influence but the disintegration that is constantly in process in Russia is having a weakening effect. It is still going on.

GARDEN NOTEBOOK

Moss in the lawn is one of the difficulties to be overcome in Prince Rupert. I have before me a leaflet dealing with this condition which suggests that moss is not necessarily a sign of sour but rather impoverished soil. Lack of drainage is also a cause. If the ground is well drained and rich, moss has not much chance. This article suggests the following:

First look to the drainage and remedy it if there is anything wrong. Then improve the fertility of the soil by the application of a complete balanced plant food. Rake thoroughly and apply the plant food at the rate of four pounds to the hundred square feet. Reseed the bare spots if any and, if the lawn is shaded, use a seed mixture especially adapted to shade. Repeat the operation every six weeks until the lawn is in good condition.

"What shall I plant this year?" is the constant query of the novice. "How can I get a succession of bloom in my garden without too great cost? What plants will give me the most for my money? Shall I sow seeds or buy plants?" Nobody can answer these questions. Each owner of a garden must work them out according to his personal taste. All depends upon the kind of garden he wishes to have. Also much depends upon the size and degree of cultivation of the garden. To those who have not cultivated a garden before, I suggest that he do not attempt too much the first year. It is an all season job and success depends to a large extent on the amount of attention given the gardens after the planting is done.

I have dozens of people ask me for advice and then I find they nearly always fail to take it. There is always some more enthusiastic or more demonstrative person than myself who tells the uninitiated exactly what should be done and to do it and the result is seen in some of the failures we notice every year. Possibly I may suggest to the person with a small garden that it is better at first to buy a few annual seedlings instead of trying to raise them. Perennials may be secured from neighbors or roots purchased from the florist. Dahlia tubers can be purchased now and should be planted soon. Gladioli bulbs should go in as soon as the weather will allow. Chrysanthemums do not usually succeed outdoors but must be lifted in or sheltered when fall comes. I have decided to give up planting mums. To get best results a greenhouse is necessary in this climate. Stocks, asters, snapdragons, marigolds, Schizanthus and most of the common annuals can be grown successfully but I do not recommend phlox drummondi, ageratum, zinnias or any of the flowers that need a lot of sunshine. Many of these may be sown out of doors but better results are obtained from the purchase of strong seedlings about the middle of May. Violas and pansies do extremely well.

This is a good time to think about window boxes. Many people who cannot have a garden can have a successful window box. Apartment dwellers might well give this attention.—H.F.P.

TO RECEIVE $25,000 PER YEAR FROM WIFE

The Mayfair set of London is agog with the news that the immensely wealthy Mrs. Ruth Mary Clarisse Cunningham-Reid left, sister of Lady Louise Mountbatten, will make a settlement of $25,000 a year on her dashing husband, Capt. Alexander Cunningham-reid, right. Mrs. Cunningham-Reid has already withdrawn her demand for an accounting of a previous amount entrusted to her husband and has agreed to forgive and forget the not-so-nice things she has said about him. However, her divorce action is still pending against the captain.

KITSEGUKLA

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sampare and their daughter and son-in-law Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Wesley, have left for Carlisle Cannery where Mr. Sampare will be engaged in carpentry work during the extending of the cannery.

Fred Sampare sponsored a fine dance here last Monday. The McDames Hall was full to capacity with the whole community in attendance as well as several friends from Kitwanga. During the interval at midnight delicious refreshments were served. Everyone had a wonderful time.

Tom Brown and family arrived at Kitsegucla from Carnaby last Monday and will remain here prior to leaving for the canneries.

Daffodil Tea And Sale Is Success

The Daffodil Tea and Sale by Queen Mary Chapter, Imperial Order, Daughters of the Empire, yesterday afternoon was a very successful affair, many ladies calling at the Oddfellows' Hall in spite of the inclement weather.

The program, featuring numbers by Mrs. H. H. Hodgson's pupils with Mrs. J. S. Black as accompanist, was very entertaining. The dancing numbers were:

Irish Jig, Pat Moore and Ann Stevens.

Waltz Clog, Sonny Boulter and Nina Youngman.

Three Rythms, Marie Boulter.

Broadway Babies, Monica Holtby, Marisa Windle and Lois Thompson.

Military Tap, Joyce Gathorne.

Gay Nineties, Pat Love and Marie Boulter.

Swannee River Tap, Jean and Eugene Christensen.

Adagio, Harry Gordon-Cooper and Miss June Batt.

There were also vocal solos by Miss Barbara Teng and piano duets by Mrs. T. A. McWaters and Mrs. W. M. Watts.
