Blackwood on BRIDGE

"Trapped," said Mr. Champion savagely when he saw the dummy in today's deal. "You needle me into a small slam and when I bid it, you go on to seven."

Opening lead: Two of clubs.

"I've got a big hand," countered Miss Brash. "Maybe you shouldn't have jumped all the way to six spades. And besides you aren't down yet."

"That's because I haven't played to the first trick yet," Mr. Champion growled.

It did appear that the odds were against making seven-odd. There would have to be a very lucky break in the trump suit, with four trumps outstanding, including the queen, jack and ten. And even if the trumps broke 2-2 it looked like a 4-1 heart break would wreck the hand.

Mr. Champion got over the first hurdle by good luck and over the second by good play. He won the opening club lead with dummy's ace and discarded a low heart from his hand.

Now if he had taken two rounds of trumps at once and depended on the hearts breaking 3-2, he would have lost his contract. Instead of doing that he took precautions against the hearts breaking badly and the important thing to note about his plan is that he started early enough.

Instead of touching trumps at trick two he played the ace of diamonds from dummy. He then led a low diamond and ruffed it. He cashed the king of spades and led a small spade to dummy's ace. The 2-2 trump break kept his chances alive. Next he led another diamond from the board and ruffed it, noting that both opponents followed suit again.

Now he led a small heart to dummy's king, played the good king and nine of diamonds and got rid of two more hearts from his hand. He led to the ace of hearts and ruffed his last heart with dummy's last trump, making seven-odd.

"Now," said Miss Brash, "don't you feel silly criticizing my bidding when the hand was an easy laydown all the time?"
