VICTORIA REPORT

Senator Rankin, a spinster, is a pretty woman, with reddish hair and a big-blue-eyed smile; Mrs. Fairclough is tall and slim, with grey hair, and she wore high heels in the woods as if they didn't hurt her. Mrs. Hodges was severely tailored, as usual, in her always perfect taste; her shoes were stout brogues, and she had green flowers in her hat. Mrs. Rolston looked pretty smart, too, and carried furs.

It was interesting to observe these four women who have made their mark in public life—and I realized, once more, that a woman, to reach the top, as these four have done, must have exceptional qualities. The voters are much choosier about women than they are about men. And, I decided once more, that we could do with more women in public life. There's only one weakness women have that they carry into public life, I think, and that is that they are sometimes inclined to take the rough and tumble of the political game a little too personally.

And, talking with Senator Rankin, I learned that in Australia, Senators are elected—and I decided once more that it's high time we elected our Senators in Canada, instead of appointing them for life.

BLACKWOOD on Bridge

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

CHAMP TEACHES 'EM; MUCH TO HIS SORROW

"Why should I give lessons?" says old Mr. Dale. "My opponents are tough enough to beat as it is."

Mr. Champion doesn't go along with this thinking. He loves to give lessons. He does it to prove how smart he is. And he never seems to realize how he pays for it.

His "pupils" seem to score brilliantly against him and to louse it up thoroughly when they are his partners. Even Mr. Muzzy occasionally scores against him by misapplying the great man's advice.

Mr. Champion has been haranguing Mr. Muzzy lately about the wisdom of refusing to win a trick the first time you have the opportunity to do so. This failed to sink into Mr. Muzzy's brain until today's deal.

Mr. Dale opened the six of hearts and the queen lost to Mr. Champion's ace. After giving Miss Brash a dirty look for going on to three no trump, Mr. Champion set about proving he could make it anyway.

He led the jack of clubs and let it ride. Blandly, Mr. Muzzy played the deuce. Here he had not one, but two, cards which could win the trick. This was following Mr. Champion's advice doubly.

Mr. Muzzy didn't know it at the time, but this was the only play to defeat the contract. Mr. Champion continued with the six of clubs and went into a long huddle when Mr. Dale played low again.

Finally he put in the eight spot from the board and Mr. Muzzy won with the queen and returned the nine of hearts. Regardless of how Mr. Champion played from here on, he was sunk. He needed two entries to the board; one to knock out the ace of clubs and one to reach the set up suit. He had only one—the king of diamonds.

"Love those lessons of yours, Champion," grinned Mr. Dale.
