Eskimo theme staged

TORONTO (CP) — The Great Hunger, a Canadian play on Eskimo society by Len Peterson, 42-year old native of Regina, was premiered at the Arts Theatre Thursday night before an audience including Northern Affairs Minister Dinsdale.

The play tells of an Eskimo's revenge for the murder of his father. Mr. Peterson wrote the play while living in an Eskimo community on Baffin Island inside the Arctic Circle.

The northern affairs department assisted Mr. Peterson in his two years of Arctic travelling. The play is being produced with aid from the Canada Council.

BLACKWOOD on BRIDGE

By EASLEY BLACKWOOD

Miss Brash's bidding terrifies Mr. Meek. He happened to be watching her in today's deal and he paled when she opened the bidding with four hears. "Vulnerable against non-vulnerable opponents," he muttered to himself.

Neither Mr. Champion nor his partner could muster the values to come into the auction at the four level and four hearts became the contract.

Mr. Champion opened the king of spades and continued the suit when Mrs. Keen flashed the nine spot.

Miss Brash ruffed the second spade, entered dummy with a small diamond to the ace and returned the six of hearts. When the deuce showed on her right she promptly finessed the ten.

Miss Brash

Mr. Meek closed his eyes. When he looked again, he saw that the ten had held and that Miss Brash, showing no particular surprise or elation, was busily cashing her three top trumps to clear the suit.

Thus she won five heart tricks, five diamonds and the ace of clubs to make her contract with an overtrick.

The finesse of the ten of hearts on the first lead of trumps was rather sensational-looking, but a necessary safety play.

Its prime purpose was not to get trumps out as quickly as possible, although if the ten did win it would be very pleasant.

The main idea was to lose the trump trick, if one had to be lost, at a time when a trump remained on the board. That trump on the board would stop the run of spades and prevent the further shortening of the trump holding in the closed hand.

Suppose Miss Brash had played her three top hearts as soon as she got in, hoping for a 3-3 break.

Now if one defender turned up with four to the jack, the contract would be lost. It would be hopeless to work on the club suit. Probably the best bet would be to run the diamonds and hope that the defender holding the good jack of trumps was also long in diamonds.

But in this deal Mrs. Keen would ruff the fourth lead of diamonds as Miss Brash discarded the trey of clubs.

The certain spade return would take Miss Brash's last trump and the ace of clubs would be her final trick—one short of her contract. As long as the adverse trumps were no worse than 4-2, the first round finesse of the ten practically guaranteed the contract.
