Fine Bill Is Interesting

"They Came to Blow Up America," a suspense-filled story of the landing of Nazi saboteurs in America, and "The Meanest Man in the World," a rollicking farce with an interesting array of fun-makers comprise an interesting double bill set for showing at the Capitol Theatre next Monday and Tuesday.

"They Came to Blow Up America" tells a thrilling drama of a ruthlessly cunning plan of the Nazis to sabotage American war production and the heroic, seemingly endless, struggle of government agents to hunt down and destroy them. George Sanders stars in the film with an outstanding supporting cast headed by Anna Sten, Ward Bond, Dennis Hoey and Sig Ruman. Sanders plays the part of a government agent who, disguised as a renegade American, enters Germany and is enrolled in a German school for saboteurs. With one tense sequence following another, the story tells how Sanders manages to overcome many difficulties and complications that beset him.

In "The Meanest Man in the World," Jack Benny is a small-town lawyer who falls in love and decides to move to New York so he can make a living Rochester is his faithful man and Priscilla Lane is the girl. Others in the cast include Edmund Gwenn, Anne Revers and Helen Reynolds.

MAIL FROM GERMANY
LISBON (AP)—A letter mailed from Britain to David Walker, British newspaperman here, arrived decorated with swastikas and bearing the German censor's stamp. The Post Office says the letter must have been mis-sorted in London, sent to Switzerland by mistake and from there into Germany.
