MUD RUTS MAKE HARD GOING

WIVES IN BARRACKS

Ethiopian Troops Take Their Women Along

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18 (AP) — There is one peculiar difference between the Ethiopian army, now standing guard in Haile Selassie's restored kingdom and other armies. The Ethiopians are allowed to have their wives with them in the barracks.

British sources here, unveiling the existence of a modern, mechanized army in Ethiopia, also made known that when a rookie takes up the martial life over there, he doesn't necessarily give up the marital.

The Ethiopian army has been "built from scratch" by a British military mission under Major-General S. S. Butler, who has spent a lifetime as a soldier in Africa.

It is composed of infantry, artillery, field company engineers and field works companies, signal, motor transport, ordnance and supply units. A regiment of armored cars is being formed to round out a force which aims at mobility on roads, in mountains or brush.

Nearly all British troops have been withdrawn from Ethiopia, first Allied nation to be taken from Axis hands. The few British who remain are assigned under treaty to guard such strategic points as the Jibuti railroad and Addis Ababa.

Meanwhile, the Ethiopian army moves toward modernization. Without murmur, the soldiers agreed to having their long fuzzy hair cut short. They wear green berets.

YEARS ago they were unknown spots on the map . . . Today they are vital centres where the mightiest struggles in world history are raging.

These names have become familiar to us. We talk about them every day. Consciously or not, our knowledge and opinions of places and world events, are gleaned from one common source—the daily newspaper.

That is why the newspaper is such an essential part of our daily life . . . That is why advertising in the newspaper holds an undisputed place—a guide to the buyer—a living force for the seller.
