POSTMENS' HOURS ARGUED IN PRESS

Britain Puts a Stop to Late Night Collections

LONDON (AP)—How late at night a postman should work is a question which has found its way out of parliament into the press.

Wilfrid A. Burke, assistant postmaster-general, started the discussion when he said that midnight letter collections will not be resumed in London although the war is ended. Mr. Burke said resumption might encourage the public to return to old and later hours of business.

The Daily Telegraph commented editorially that "hitherto most of us believed the post office was conducted for the public benefit, and that late hours for a portion of those concerned were considered inevitable, as in some other callings —railways, buses, tubes and trams, bakeries and newspapers."

Thereupon G. A. Stevens, acting general secretary of the Union of Post Office Workers, submitted a letter saying that while Mr. Burke had promised the last collection of the day would be at 9 p.m. instead of midnight, the union considered even 9 p.m. "far too late.'

Mr. Stevens said the hour was too late "having regard to the unsocial and irksome attendance the postal staff will have to undertake." Work would not finish at 9 p.m. if there was a collection at that hour, completing and handling of mail would take until 11 p.m. or later.

"My members hold that a collection fairly late at night is in the main a luxury service, and that little, if any, benefit would accrue to the public generally," he said.

He added that "reputable business houses" had re-organized their posting departments in an effort to clear their correspondence early in the day, and the inefficient business elements who have not improved their organization have no right to expect postal workers' conditions to be worsened in order to bolster up their lack of enterprise."

Postal workers desired to provide a satisfactory standard of service but they asked the public not to condemn them to prewar work conditions which before 1939 often made "men strangers to their own children except on Sundays."

Mrs. C. A. Nixon of Abbotsford, the former Margaret McLeod, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jarvis H. McLeod, passed through the city on the Princess Norah today bound for Juneau, accompanied by her daughter, Lynn. Mrs. Nixon will visit her sister in the Alaska city.

LOCAL RED CROSS HEARS POST WAR PLANS OUTLINED

The post war program of the Canadian Red Cross was outlined to the executive of the local Red Cross Society by provincial Commissioner Col. C. A. Scott Thursday afternoon. The program includes emphasis on blood donor clinics throughout Canada, with two mobile clinics in British Columbia, swimming and life saving instruction, nutrition education, Junior Red Cross activities, outpost hospitals, and disaster relief.

Commissioner Scott delivered an outline of the wartime activities of the Dominion Red Cross, of which he was overseas commissioner. War work of the Red Cross chapters in Northern British Columbia was of a greater volume than that of the south, he revealed.

Present at the meeting in the Civic Centre were President Arnold Flaten, Mrs. C. H. Elkins, Mrs. E. J. Fitzpatrick, Mrs. C. Smith, Mrs. H. A. Breen and H. A. Breen.

HOW CAN I ? ? ?
By ANNE ASHLEY

Q. How can I prevent perspiring hands?

A. Dissolve a tablespoon of alum in a quart of water. Hold the hands in this colution for half an hour before going to bed every night until relieved.

Q. How can I unscrew can tops readily, that are stubborn in yielding?

A. Keep a few narrow strips of sandpaper on hand. Press a strip around the side of the screw top and it seldom refuses to yield.

Q. How can I take the soreness from a bruise?

A. Butter, when applied as a salve, will take the soreness from most bruises and often prevents discoloration.

ESCAPE WAS MIRACULOUS

Reporting that his father, Ald. Robert McKay, was making good recovery in the Smithers Hospital from the effects of shock and a badly stiffened back and that Mrs. McKay was also doing well after having been badly bruised and shocked in an automobile accident last Sunday from which they miraculausly escaped death or much more serious injury, Robert McKay, jr., is back from a hurried trip to the interior town. Ald. McKay is expected to be able to leave hospital by the end of the week and may be home early next week. It was not certain when Mr. McKay, jr., left Smithers as to when Mrs. McKay would be in condition fit to permit her leaving hospital.

The accident occurred near Moricetown, about 18½ miles west of Smithers, as Mr. and Mrs. McKay were returning in a light panel delivery car from a trip to Vancouver. A speedster and "road hog" in a grey sedan, for which the police are searching, came flying along the road and Mr. McKay was forced to draw up sharply to the side of the road which gave way. The local car dropped off the side, turning over three times and landed upside down among stumps some twenty feet down the sharp embankment. The top was smashed in and fenders and other parts badly broken up.

Mr. McKay was able to get out through the window and dragged his wife out. Then they waited forty-five minutes for assistance, a passing car picking them up and taking them to Smithers where they were hospitalized.

CANADA IS A
Moderate Nation
★ ★ ★

Moderation is a Canadian characteristic.

It is a heritage of our people. As children, we learn moderation.

As adults, we practice it. As Canadians, we are proud of it.

In spite of post-war temptations to splurge and spend, we have kept our heads. We've acted moderately . . . we have not given in to the natural desire for immediate enjoyment of everything and anything in short supply . . . and that is why, as individuals and as a nation, we are unhampered by the excesses of inflation.

We can point to a fine record. We can point to Canada's future with certainty. But, we can do this only if we continue to live up to our Canadian principles of moderation—moderation in all things.

Men who Think of Tomorrow . . . Practice Moderation Today!
