MR. AND MRS. GINO PIERO MOSSINI

MOSSINI-RUTHERFORD RITES

Church of Annunciation scene of mid-July wedding

A lovely mid-summer wedding was solemnized in the Church of the Annunciation July 15 when Sharon Maureen Rutherford and Gino Piero Mossini exchanged vows before the altar adorned with multi-colored flowers and flickering candlelight.

Rev. M. C. Murphy officiated at the 7:30 p.m. ceremony for the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Rutherford and the son of Mrs. Piero Mossini all of this city.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was radiant in a full-length gown fashioned of white lace.

Side tiers of ruffled tulle accented the lace skirt panels which fell from a fitted bodice framed by a scooped neckline of pearls.

Her matching jacket was styled with a Peter Pan collar and long sleeves tapered to lily-points while her shoulder-length veil gracefully fell from an encrusted tiara and she carried red and yellow roses for pretty harmony.

To complete her ensemble the bride chose to wear pearls, a gift of the groom.

Attending as bridesmaid Miss Wilma Denluck was gowned in pale green nylon. Her ballerina-length gown was created with a bouffant skirt and a blouson bodice, accented with a circular neckline.

A dainty headpiece of ruffled tulle and a green carnation bouquet completed the attendant's portrait.

Best man was Joseph Arseneau and ushers were Earl Kentula and Giordano Guistini.

Organist was Mrs. Denis Rowse.

For the reception in the Armoury Mrs. Jeffery Fregin on behalf of the bride's mother received wearing a sky-blue cocktail gown and matching accessories.

A two-tiered wedding cake centred the bride's table, decorated with bouquets of yellow roses and pink and white crepe tiers.

Mr. Arseneau proposed the toast to the bride and friends of the bride acting as serviteurs were Miss Glenna Stava and Mrs. R. Pedersen.

Newlyweds have taken up residence at 73 Biggar Place.

The groom is employed in the body shop of Rupert Motors and the bride was formerly employed at La Gondoa Cafe.

Long delay

PARIS (Reuters)—Long hemlines were definitely the order of the day in the collection of Jacques Griffe shown today—the first of the fall and winter fashion shows.

The hemlines came well down below the knee.

Griffe's inaugural presentation had sombre colors, no tricks or special treats, and evolved supple sheaths as the No. 1 silhouette.

New Zealand critics acclaim Lois Marshall

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP)—Canadian soprano Lois Marshall is in the midst of a triumphal tour of New Zealand. Arriving in this country comparatively little known, she has won critical acclaim seldom awarded a visiting singer.

The Toronto-born singer is touring New Zealand under the auspices of the national broadcasting service. She is appearing in all the main cities, in some with the national orchestra and in others in solo concerts.

Critics and audiences have been equally delighted at her work. The music critic of the New Zealand Herald said: "A new star of first magnitude moved into the Auckland musical firmament last night when the Canadian soprano Lois Marshall appeared in her first recital here.

"This was the greatest soprano singing heard here since the visit of Victoria de los Angeles . . . Her voice thrills over its whole range, which is wide and gloriously even, with not a single rough edge."

The Auckland Star said: "Her voice is a splendid instrument, rich and even through a full daramtic range, flexible enough to handle rapid passages without losing pitch, large enough to flood the town hall with sound when required."

STILL No. 1 EXPORT

Correct perfume use strictly acquired art

By PEGGY MASSIN

PARIS (Reuters) — Blending rare perfumes has been a time-honored art in France through the ages and today it still tops the list of luxury export items alongside the famous French wines.

As early as the year 1190, Philippe Auguste had grouped the first chemists in France into a society known as the Corporation of French Perfumers.

A fundamental knowledge of perfume is an acquired art, comparable to learning to analyze high fashion and select the styles best suited to the individual.

In selecting a perfume, the old adage that "what is one man's meat is another man's poison" holds true. A fragrance which is subtly provocative on one woman may be actually unpleasant to her twin sister because of chemical reaction on the individual skin.

Jean-Jacques Guerlain, owner and director of the perfume firm which bears his name, states that each year women are becoming more knowledgeable about het subtleties and reactions of perfume.

BLEND IMPORTANT

Guerlain believes that all great contemporary scents are blended with some natural floral essence, as opposed to the purely synthetic compositions contrived of chemical blends.

A survey taken in leading retail shops in Paris reveals that Frenchwomen are divided into two schools of thought concerning the buying and wearing of perfume. Some women believe implicitly in one, and only one, special fragrance which seems ideally suited to their personalities. Others are in favor of a veritable "perfume wardrobe," with numerous changes for the hour of the day, the occasion, the mood and the season.

Each perfume certainly has its own presonality. Romantic clothes call for light and poetic floral essences. Sportswear demands something crisp and spicy with an undertone hinting of field or forest. Sophisticated formal clothes and furs are the perfect backdrop for heady, exotic scents like Jean Patou's Joy.

Statistically it is known that blondes prefer the fresh, crisp, flower scents, while brunettes tend to buy the sensuous, Oriental and headier fragrances.

Francois Lake News

By AGNES H. NEAVE
Daily News Correspondent

"In 1923, when the whole north country was still known as Bulkley Valley to the Institutes, a Women's Institute with the charming name of Wistaria was organized on the north short of Ootsa Lake. It was the first in the north and there was great rejoicing over it at the first provincial conference."

This is the way the chapter on the Bulkley-Tweedsmuir district begins in "Modern Pioneers," a history of the British Columbia Women's Institutes, which has just been published in celebration of their golden anniversary.

It goes on to give highlights of the work of the 11 Institutes functioning in that locality, including Francois Lake of which Mrs. Reginald Partington, 1960 provincial president, is a member.

Mrs. Partington was also, with Mrs. R. C. Palmer of Kelowna, a member of the book committee which compiled "Modern Pioneers." Chairman and editor was Mrs. Gilean Douglas of Whaletown on Cortes Island. All three women have served as officers at local, district, provincial and national levels. Mrs. Douglas was also provincial publicity convener for four years and national Director of Public Relations. She edited the brief which won the Tory Award for the Federated Women's Institutes of Canada in 1955 and has had four books of her own published. Of "Modern Pioneers" she says:

"I feel privileged to have been asked to write and edit this book, but the Institutes themselves are the real authors of our history."

The book begins with the birth of the world's first Women's Institute at Stoney Creek, Ontario, in 1897. The trail lead from there to the Pacific and on to Wales, where the Federation of WI's of England and Wales was formed by Mrs. Alfred Watt of Vancouver Island in 1915. Then back to Ottawa for the formation of the Federated Women's Institutes of Canada four years later and again across the sea: this time to Stockholm, where Mrs. Watt's dream of an international organization became a reality in the Associated Countrywomen of the World.

In the chapter titled "Wind of the Western Sea" the panorama of the Women's Institutes of this province unrolls in photograph and story from 1900 to the present day. Sketches of modern pioneers, vignettes of the work of 232 branches (including the 47 of Central Interior, Peace River and Cariboo, the 19 of Vancouver Island North, with Bella Bella and a Yukon Territory) affiliated with bits of general B.C. history, complete this record of women who "have simply extended their homemaking from family to community, to province, to nation and finally to the world."

That is the past. "Tomorrow?" asks "Modern Pioneers."

"Tomorrow those modern pioneers, the members of Luna WI, will be putting on a banquet to earn money to buy playground equipment for the school children of Moon."

TODAY'S SALAD

JELLIED VEGETABLE SALAD

1 package lemon jelly powder
1½ cups hot water
2 tablespoons vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
Few grains pepper
½ cup chopped cabbage
½ cup finely chopped celery
½ cup shredded carrot
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
1 cup canned peas, drained OR cooked fresh peas
Green pepper rings (optional)

Dissolve jelly powder in hot water, then stir in vinegar, salt and pepper. Chill mixture until it is the consistency of heavy syrup. Fold in cabbage, celery, carrot, onion and peas. Arrange green pepper rings in bottom of a large mold or individual molds, fill molds with gelatin-vegetable mixture and chill until set, about 1 hour. 6 servings.

Changing hemlines

MOOSE JAW, Sask. (CP)—It took 53 years, but Mrs. A. L. Anderson here has received a letter her sister wrote from Buffalo, N.Y. The letter addressed to the then Agnes Bester of Swenton, Ont., found up in a post office that closed years ago and owners remodelling the former post office found the letter stuck between two walls.
